Apollo Opens Moon-Trip Door

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 7, sailing into its second hundred hours in space, has opened the door for firm planning on putting three men around the moon on Christmas Day.

A reliable source said Tuesday the flight of Apollo 7 is going so well that high United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials are meeting this week to set a date for a flight around the moon. One source set launch day as Dec. 21, this year.

The source said contractors believe they will be able to establish procedures of training and hardware operation in time to make the flight in December. NASA, he said, is "bunting a gut" to meet the December date.

"It will all depend upon whether the astronauts can get in enough training to do it," he said. "Everything else will be ready."

The only thing that might block a circum-lunar flight for Apollo 8, the next manned mission, would be problems later in the 11-day flight of Apollo 7.

But Apollo 7 was flying in "good shape," said flight controller Glynn Lunney, although the astronauts are fighting colds.

Forces Pay Increase Retroactive to Oct. 1

OTTAWA (CP)—Pay increases for the armed forces will be announced in three to four weeks and will be retroactive to Oct. 1, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said Tuesday.

Cadieux said the announcement will not involve service pensions. The aim is to adjust salaries "and do some catching up."

Reprisals Face Defiant Pupils

Voting Age in Britain Going Down to 18

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government has announced it will lower the voting age to 18 from 21, increasing the electorate by 3,000,000 voters to 40,000,000. A bill will be introduced in Parliament to enable teenage voters to register by February, 1970, well in time for the next election.

MONTREAL (CP) — Alarmed authorities threatened reprisals Tuesday as student protests snowballed across the province, with defiant teenagers taking over two more junior colleges and sympathizers boycotting classes in other institutions. (See also Page 24.)

Ten of Quebec's 23 new junior colleges now are entirely in student hands, with the latest two occupations in Chicoutimi and St. John's. In addition, students have occupied three of the four buildings of an 11th institution, Old Montreal College.

Sympathizers took over the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Montreal and a high school in suburban Laval, while a one-day boycott of classes affected the University of Montreal and the province's seven normal schools.

Concern over the mushrooming anti-establishment movement which now involves about 25,000 students — brought college administrators together for an emergency meeting Monday night.

Plans for action

There was no collective announcement after the closed-door session, but administrators of two Montreal colleges — Maisonneuve and Old Montreal — announced plans for "concrete action."

Mr. Gaudet, associate director of student services at Old Montreal, said action by his college might go as far as non-recognition of student achievement so far this year. This would make it necessary for students to start the year's work over again.

Former stand

In the Saguenay River city of Chicoutimi, where students took over their college after voting 76 to 23 in favor of the move, college authorities took an even firmer stand.

Classes will resume Monday, Oct. 21, the college announced, and students who do not show up will lose their year's work.

The youthful strikers have two main grievances against the provincial government — a lack of university facilities and a revised student aid policy which includes a cutback in scholarship funds and higher interest rates for student loans.

About the lack of facilities, students say 60 per cent of the first graduates of the new post-secondary colleges will find no room.

The crew, navy Capt. Walter Schirra, Walter Cunningham and air force Maj. Donn Eisele, took television viewers on a tour of the world's highest sickroom Tuesday. They ignored their colds long enough to perform some zero-gravity acrobatics.

The spacemen, all needing a shave, cavorted in the weightlessness of outer space while the Apollo television camera carried their antics live to an audience on earth.

"Coming to you live from outer space, the one and only original Apollo orbiting road show starring the great acrobats from outer space, Walter Schirra and Walt Cunningham," Schirra announced as the space-to-ground TV signal started.

Eisele began the show with a sign used Monday in their first live telecast from space: "Hello from the Apollo room, high above everything."

First Cunningham and then Schirra floated into view from the spacecraft's lower equipment bay. They resembled swimmers under water, gliding smoothly and without effort past the camera.

Schirra then gave a television tour of the complex spacecraft. The camera showed the crew members working before the console and displays which monitor the health of the spacecraft. At one point Eisele placed a pen in mid-air. The pen stayed there until he reached up to use it again.

The three obviously were concerned about their colds congesting the tubes leading to the ears. If these tubes are

Rhodesian Front Party

British Bid Rejected

From UPI, CP

The ruling Rhodesian Front Party Tuesday night rejected outright the latest British proposals for settlement of the Rhodesian independence issue, giving a strong indication that the government of Premier Ian Smith also will turn them down.

Party chairman Ralph Ntshang said: "To have accepted the British proposals would have been total and abject surrender."

The British proposals were given to Smith last Sunday at the end of his 20-hour talks with British Prime Minister Wilson aboard the British assault ship HMS Fearless at Gibraltar.

Smith took the proposals back to Salisbury and laid them before a cabinet meeting Tuesday morning but no formal decision on them has been taken so far.

The proposals were published in a white paper in London Tuesday.

The Rhodesian Front Party executive is scheduled to meet today to consider the proposals, and well-informed political sources believe it will reject them.

In London, Wilson told Parliament Tuesday Britain would stand fast in its demand that rebel Rhodesia must develop majority rule by black Africans as a condition for official independence.

Wilson said he was "keeping the door open" to further contacts on the subject although Smith left the Gibraltar talks with Wilson after no apparent progress.

"Our position at the end of the talks, as throughout these past years, maintains the position repeatedly stated . . . No secession, no slandering the door by us."

He emphasized the British government would not continue.

Team Sees No Genocide

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — A team of foreign observers Tuesday reported no evidence supporting claims of genocide in Eastern Nigeria where rebel Biafrans are making a last stand against federal troops. The team had visited the southern sector of the fighting front where a federal noose is tightening around Umuahia, last major city in Biafran hands.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian newspapers want everyone but themselves to help put the post office on a pay-as-you-go basis. Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said in the Commons Tuesday.

He said newspapers gave almost unanimous editorial approval when he first announced that he wanted to balance the post office budget.

"Now the question is: 'Who, me?'" said Kierans.

TOUGH REPLY

The postmaster-general replied toughly to an opposition assault on his plans to increase the rates on second-class mail — which includes mailed newspapers — and to stop Saturday mail deliveries.

He said the present subsidy afforded publishers by the Canadian public in delivery of their publications is $37,000,000 annually.

He repeated his refusal to send rate-increasing legislation to a Commons committee for discussion before it is passed by Parliament.

ARGUMENTS ONLY

But he disclosed that 35 Liberal MPs had formed a caucus group to study five-day delivery and he would listen to their arguments, not to opposition "emotion."

He also promised to make public by Thursday a series of financial statements and supporting documents prepared by his department as a basis for the decisions to change postal rates and delivery schedules.

Garrison Terms Set By Czechs, Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Otdzhik Cernik of Czechoslovakia agreed with Kremlin leaders Tuesday on a treaty dealing with basing of Soviet troops in his country. Czechoslovak sources said. It was eight weeks in the making.

Official confirmation of an agreement was lacking. The Russians sought such a treaty to give final legality to the presence of their soldiers in Czechoslovakia.

NO INTERFERENCE

The Czechoslovak radio's Moscow correspondent, Anselm Kuska, reported in a dispatch received in Prague that the treaty covering economic and legal conditions for stationing troops probably would be signed today. Prague television reported Cernik was assured by the Kremlin that Russian troops would not interfere in Czechoslovak internal affairs.

CERTAIN QUESTIONS

Czechoslovak sources reported Cernik, who returned to Moscow Monday for his fourth visit since the Soviet Union and four orthodox allies dispatched military forces to curb Czechoslovakia's liberalization program, would be heading back soon to Prague.

A communique, relayed abroad by the Czechoslovak news agency CTK, said the two sides exchanged views on certain questions resulting from previous Moscow agreements. "The question of the terms for the temporary stay" of the troops.

Australian 'Disaster' Declared

PERTH (Reuters) — The small Western Australian state town of Meckering, devastated by an earthquake Monday, was declared a disaster area following two more small tremors Tuesday.

Tremors were felt throughout the region Tuesday, including this state capital 94 miles west of Meckering, where all but two of the town's 30 buildings were destroyed Monday.

Western Australian state Premier David Brand, declaring Meckering a disaster area after an inspection tour, said he would make an immediate plea to the federal government for financial aid.

There were no reports of damage or casualties in Tuesday's tremors, which lasted only a few seconds.

The tremors came as workers were clearing piles of rubble from buildings damaged or destroyed in the quake which injured 31 persons Monday.

Damage to Meckering alone was estimated at $2,000,000.

However, the federal government has made it clear it will insist on an end to the Biafran secession as a condition for ending the war.

drof Gorchio and Vasily Kuznetsov, a deputy foreign minister who has been a frequent visitor lately in Prague.

Cernik was accompanied by his deputy, Pavel Calotka, Justice Minister Vladimir Kucera and a number of top military officials.

Cernik and other Czechoslovak leaders agreed in principle here Oct. 14 to enter into a treaty that would permit some Soviet troops to remain in their country. The Kremlin pledged to remove "the other troops by stages."

No official figures have been made public on the number of soldiers to leave and the number to stay. It has been reported in Czechoslovakia that the Soviet Union wants to keep from 30,000 to 100,000 troops there. The present occupation force has been estimated at from 250,000 to 300,000.

In the Oct. 14 talks here the Czechoslovak leaders agreed to a number of measures aimed at least the partial restoration of Soviet-style rule in their country. These included strengthening the position of the Communist party and tightening press censorship.

presented to the Commons Tuesday. The white paper made clear that while the British leader stuck to his old "six principles" demand to give more blacks the vote in white-ruled Rhodesia, he was ready to make a number of concessions without receiving any in return.

Dismissed was Wilson's old demand that the blacks, outnumbering the whites 20-1, be in power before Rhodesia is given legal independence. Dismissed also was his previous insistence on a wide-based temporary administration in which the British-appointed governor would have all police and military power before Rhodesia was given full independence.

All Wilson demanded in the 30 hours of talks aboard the Fearless was that Smith acknowledge that eventually Rhodesia must have majority rule and it was up to the white man with Britain's help, to train the blacks so that eventually they could take effective political control.

This Smith refused to do and while Wilson, in his statement to the Commons, noted that a "wide difference" remains between the two sides, Britain would neither open the door nor sell out to Smith.

He indicated that the ball is in Smith's court. Commonwealth Secretary George Thomson would be ready to fly to Salisbury for further talks with Smith if Smith so requested but there would be no weakening on the six principles.

ther a job nor a place in university when they complete the two-year course of study next year.

The students fear that space limitations will necessarily turn back much of next year's flood of university applicants. The province has only three French-language universities to handle the graduates of the 23 colleges.

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal has said the student demand for a second French-language university in Montreal has already been met, and the institution will open as scheduled next September.

SHORT OF RESOURCES

But he said nothing can be done about the student and program because the province lacks the financial resources.

A statement from the minister's office Tuesday said the students held a noon meeting and added their voices to those supporting the strikers. The McGill students announced plans for a march on Old Montreal College today.

Also out today will be English-speaking Loyola College students, who decided last week on a one-day boycott of classes in support of student demands.

The statement said that after meetings with parties concerned in the protest, "it is evident that if students do not return to classes shortly, the first semester will be entirely invalidated."

"Students will have to register elsewhere or take the semester over again."

FIGURE GIVEN

The statement also said that a lost semester would involve a loss of about $1,000,000.

It said the education minister will make a statement in a few days concerning the development of higher education and the relationships between education and the economy.

While support of the strikers' position was expressed by groups of parents and teachers and other organizations, a disident faction of students banded together in an attempt to persuade their classmates to return.

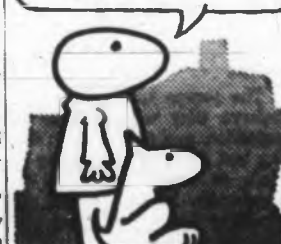

FROM ARENA

A Tuesday night march on Maisonneuve College from the east-end Maisonneuve Richard Arena was organized by Maisonneuve student Marcel Longpre, who described the strikers as "pure anarchists."

He said the Maisonneuve student vote was 715 to 640 in favor of a takeover, and of the 715 in favor there were at least 200 "who only wanted a holiday."

Insurance Reaction Not Much

Public reaction so far to the royal commission report on B.C. car insurance appears to indicate less interest than expected.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Tuesday.

He said 2,000 copies of the report, released a week ago today, had been ordered from the Queen's Printer but only 500 have been sold.

Mr. Peterson again declined to say if the government might accept any of the recommendations but said his own view about such things is that governments shouldn't rush into change for the sake of change, nor should they be bound by traditional concepts.

Zinc in Diet Difficult to Escape

Dear Dr. Meher: I read somewhere that zinc is important in the diet and, if men don't get enough of it, they may not be fertile. Is this true? If so, in what foods is zinc present besides seafood? — J. M. E.

Zinc is one of the "trace elements" that has had considerable discussion lately. It is present in all tissues of the body, and appears to be related to enzyme activity.

I don't know of any special relationship to fertility. Extra amounts of zinc have been found to accelerate wound healing, and extra zinc has been tried in cases of extensive arteriosclerosis.

In actual living habits, it is hard to escape getting enough zinc because good sources of it, besides seafood, include beef, egg, liver, many vegetables including corn, beans, peas, and others, cereals, yeast and fruits and is pale. There is little or no sweating. Hair is coarse, sparse, and brittle. Eyebrows are thin in the outer third.

True, underactive thyroid usually is controlled readily enough by thyroid medication, but, as in so many health problems, there is always the case, which for one reason or another, is more than ordinarily hard to solve.

In your particular case I have two suggestions.

First, there are various types of thyroid medications, synthetic ones, that could be tried to determine which does you the most good with the least associated difficulty for you.

Second, another possibility which must be considered is that, as sometimes is the case, underfunctioning of the pituitary gland may be the underlying cause of the thyroid gland's not being as active as it should.

Le Parti Quebecois

LE PARTI QUEBECOIS will contest the next election on a platform demanding sovereign status for the province as a French state. In the event of success, it would be prepared to negotiate an economic partnership with the rest of Canada.

The new party has emerged after a four-day convention in Quebec City which saw the union of Le mouvement souverainiste-association and Le ralliement nationale, respectively headed by Mr. Rene Levesque and Mr. Gilles Giguere.

But it is Mr. Levesque who dominates the party scene.

In an address at the conclusion of the convention he called for an end of Canadian federalism which he described as "a crazy house," thereby establishing the main line of battle between his new party and the provincial Liberals, headed by Mr. Jean Lesage, and Union Nationale forces under the man who succeeded Mr. Daniel Johnson, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand.

Among other things promised at the convention of Le Parti Quebecois was establishment of French as the working language of Quebec, although maintenance of state schools for the English-language minority would be guaranteed.

But there would be sharp teeth in any such legislation. English-speaking Quebecers would be given five years to adjust to life in the country of a French-speaking people. Presumably, unless they were equipped with French they would be unable to hold jobs. Or they might lose citizenship.

It is proposed to place communications and drug industries under state control. And a more radical move would require all doctors to go on the state payroll and make all hospitals, clinics and medical centres operate on a non-profit basis.

Foreign capital, says the policy statement, would be welcome in a sovereign state of Quebec. But there are strings on such enterprises. In the first place, they would be required to deal with their employees in French under a non-negotiable clause in labor agreements, to include a majority of Quebecers in local management and to reinvest an unspecified part of profits in Quebec.

Such provisions possibly would be no deterrent to French investment, which may explain the presence of French observers at the Quebec City convention and their obvious interest in the proposals of Mr. Levesque's party.

What the former Liberal provincial cabinet minister has done, with the support of Mr. Giguere, is to organize more moderate separatists with dissident forces of the older parties in what must become a third power in Quebec politics. He says himself he does not expect to win the next provincial election. But he believes he will hold the balance of power.

Mr. Levesque is an astute politician. But possibly his ambitions have pushed his optimism out of reasonable bounds. He may underestimate, for instance, the reaction among both Union Nationale and Liberals towards a coalition to snatch away any balance of power dream. And he may misinterpret the thinking of the majority of sober citizens, concerned as much with security as sovereignty.

No leader dare promise his adherents in an independent French state any economic union with the rest of this country. He might do well to consider the prospect of a chilly economic isolation with only someone like President Charles de Gaulle to rescue him.

Hospital Program

ONE CAN APPRECIATE the concern of Saanich Peninsula council, as expressed by North Saanich Alderman Trevor Davis, that a replacement for Rest Haven Hospital be included in the hospital construction program that lies ahead for the capital region. But how far ahead is the important question for the whole Sooke-to-Gulf Islands district, and nothing should be allowed to obscure it in the brief interval remaining before the owner-electors vote on October 26 in the first hospital loan referendum.

On this occasion they are being asked to approve the borrowing of $9,300,000—40 per cent of this debt to be paid from local taxes—for the initial phase of solving the problem of the community's serious shortage of hospital accommodation. The money will be spent, if the ratepayers so authorize by a 60-per cent majority vote, on providing 600 additional extended-care beds, on planning future acute-care beds and, to the extent of $2,000,000 according to the hospital district, on improving existing acute-care facilities. The new extended-care beds, further, will relieve the pressure on the acute-care accommodation.

It is impossible to tell whether the bylaw would stand a better or worse chance of passing if the district board had been ready by this time to provide more details of the proposed program, particularly of locations. But the need of the whole community is in no doubt, nor is the fact that the benefits of new and better facilities will extend to all parts of the district.

The consequence of defeat of the bylaw would hardly be a change in the planning, moreover, but only delay. And with delay, a still more grievous shortage and higher costs. The time to get started is, clearly, now.

Treachery

PIERRE MULELE was a Peking-trained Communist, who led a rebellion in the Congo in 1964 which is reported to have cost the lives of 500 Europeans and nearly 9,000 natives. He was a violent and, so his enemies declare, a brutal and conscienceless revolutionary.

Perhaps he was. It is clear he directed massacres, pillage and destruction in the Congo while he was a fugitive living in the neighboring Congo Republic, just across the river which separates the two "new African" states.

Whatever he may have been, he accepted the amnesty of President Joseph Mobutu of the Congo, and on Sept. 29 returned to his country. It hardly matters whether or not he intended to continue his campaign against the government. It is inconsequential that he may have decided to abandon the Communist doctrine which endorses violence. He was a man under safe conduct.

Yet, on his return, The Congo government immediately ordered his arrest and trial for treason.

Last week, an appeal for clemency refused by President Mobutu, he was executed by firing squad.

This breach of faith, this undisguised treachery, must condemn The Congo for the same sort of savagery and lack of integrity with which it charged its victim.

No Spy Should Be Without One

The Canadian Passport Is a Handy Tool For Anybody Bent on Espionage Career

By PETER WORTHINGTON from Ottawa

NO spy worthy of the name would be without one. It is more useful than cloaks and daggers, code books and cyanide pills. It is an all-purpose, easily-obtained, reasonably-respected adjunct to espionage — the Canadian passport.

Since Earl Ray, the accused assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King, was caught carrying one, Canada has received a spate of dubious publicity over its passport.

But there is more to our passport story than Earl Ray's involvement. It's a long story that stretches back 40 years and links Canada to a startling number of great international espionage cases.

Few things so aptly reflect the contradictions, ironies and incongruities of our policies as the passport.

It seems a national quirk, a Canadian idiosyncrasy, that ours is perhaps the world's most difficult country to enter legally as an immigrant — yet one of the easiest to enter illegally as a spy. We are reluctant to grant citizenship to honest applicants — yet make it ludicrously easy to obtain false Canadian citizenship.

Broadly speaking, all anyone needs to pose as a Canadian citizen, complete with passport, is to be Russian, Chinese or Albanian. It is the initiative to visit a travel agency; to have a reasonable cover story; to be under oath; and to pay a $5 fee.

Canada is one of the few countries that issues passports by mail and doesn't require a personal appearance before an official.

Canada has never caught a Soviet intelligence officer. The closest we came was when Igor Gouzenko "delivered" to the RCMP Sam Carr and Fred Rose — both of them were long-time espionage officers but were local "legal" Canadian citizens, and therefore traitors.

Soviet "legals," judging from the evidence, have immunity in Canada. This is the de facto result of our policy on espionage, and not the fault of the RCMP which probably could identify a number of Soviet agents if the government wished, and would prosecute.

One of the early cases of the Canadian passport being used by Soviet agents occurred in 1931 when the British arrested Hjalmar Nodine who headed the old Canadian espionage service in Shanghai.

The capture resulted in the breaking of a Soviet Far East spy ring. As well as having 12 pseudonyms, Nodine used a Canadian passport.

Richard Sorge has been called the greatest spy of the Second World War. He worked for Soviet intelligence in Japan before the war, and in China during it. He is now an official, if posthumous, "Hero of the Soviet Union."

He is remembered popularly today as the spy who warned Stalin that Hitler was about to invade — information that Stalin chose to ignore. But even more important, he told the Soviets that Japan had no intention of attacking Russia from the east. This allowed the Red Army to concentrate all its forces on the western front.

Before the war the "Sorge" ring carried Canadian passports. Max Klausen, a long-time member of the ring, used a Canadian passport as far back as 1935.

According to Klausen, one Col. Borovich, who was Sorge's superior, headed a spy ring in Canada before being transferred to China.

The Spanish Civil War produced a bonanza in passports for Soviet espionage. Members of the International Brigade invariably had their passports confiscated "for safekeeping" when they arrived in Spain, and some had been "lost" when they wanted to recover them.

One of these passports was used by Soviet agent Ramon Mercader, who got the passport issued to Tony Rubich, a Canadian of Yugoslav origin who had been killed in the Spanish civil war.

The passport was "adjusted" to read Fred Jacson of Montreal, and Mercader used it to visit Mexico in 1940 and sink an axe into the chest of Stalin's one-time foe, the exiled Leon Trotsky.

The use of another of these "International Brigade" passports was disclosed in 1946 when Sam Carr, former national organizer of the Communist Party of Canada and the "recruiter" for Soviet military intelligence, tried to get re-entrance in the name of Ignacy Witczak.

Michael Mitnick, deputy director of the GRU (military intelligence), together with the deputy head of the NKVD, toured the U.S., Canada and Mexico, posing as diplomatic couriers while lining up espionage activities.

In Canada they got Sam Carr to get the Witczak passport renewed for an agent working in California. Sam Carr paid $3,000 to an official in the passport office — someone who has never been openly identified and who presumably is still "in place."

The whole thing was "blown" when Igor Gouzenko, a military intelligence officer working in the embassy as a code clerk, asked for asylum in Canada and told everything. The phony Witczak had disappeared by the time the FBI came to check up.

Before the war Postmaster General Ernest Bertrand was hoodwinked into recommending that Soviet agent Willy Brandes be given a Canadian passport.

Brandes' target wasn't in Canada, but in Britain where he was supposed to sabotage an arsenal.

His scheme fell flat when a woman he recruited to help nixed out to be with British code intercepting. Brandes escaped.

In recent years Canada's links with great espionage cases have been numerous. Col. Russell Abel, the most successful spy-master known to have operated in the U.S., came to the U.S. through Canada. (How many Col. Abels are still in place is open to speculation.)

When Gordon Lunan, a secretary of Chalmers, Ont., was arrested in 1961, it turned out that he wasn't a Canadian after all but really Col. Kenneth Menzies of the KGB.

His partners in espionage Peter and Helen Kipper, who are still serving time in Britain, carried Canadian passports as well as New Zealand ones.

Last year KGB Col. Yuri Lyagov was arrested in South Africa posing as Edmund Trinka of Fort Whyte, Man.

The famous "Lucy" ring (the informed Stalin of Hitler's plans during the war) operated in Switzerland but was getting money from Canada.

Hermine Rahabovich came to Montreal and became, through the Soviet embassy in Ottawa, a channel for funds that kept the "Lucy" ring in business. At the time Col. Zolotov, military attaché at the embassy, also provided passports for agents working in the U.S.

Even the notorious atom spies Klaus Fuchs, Alan Nunn May and Bruno Pontecorvo worked or lived in Canada before being identified as working for the Soviets.

Nunn May provided the Soviets with samples of U-235 and U-238 when he was with the National Research Council. Pontecorvo was on a scientific mission to Canada (and now works in the Soviet "atom city" of Dnepropetrovsk). Klaus Fuchs was sent to Canada as a German refugee before being allowed into the U.S.

Victor Sperber, the "bad spy" who inadvertently spied the present Royal Commission into security and espionage, was involved in collecting data for passports.

One of his jobs was to gather information from tombstones that could be used to establish ing "covers" for Soviet agents. One of his assignments was to find a dead "Japanese-Canadian" that the Russians could use. Sperber's death in 1961 closed a sordid chapter in spydom.

In 1963 in Australia, Soviet diplomat Ivan Skripov was expelled for espionage. In this case the Canadian passport of Andrew Huh, a Czech-born Canadian, turned up, mysteriously, in a graveyard.

In 1962 convicted Soviet spy Dr. Robert Soblen fled to Israel on a false Canadian passport that once belonged to his brother, Jack Soblen, also a Soviet agent, who had once lived in Montreal.

With passports and visas, the passport is seldom the crime. Despite the rampant misuse of passports, only half-hearted efforts have been made to tighten regulations and penalties.

On the books now is a move to authorize a 14-year sentence for misuse of passports.

But up to now, punishments have been gentle and mild.

Recently the government has begun to tighten its visa regulations too. Now entrants are issued a non-immigrant arrival-departure card in triplicate.

One card is put on file, one taken when the holder arrives in Canada, and one taken when the person departs. At least the government now knows that someone of similar name has left, even though his or her activities inside Canada may be a mystery.

But the issuance of passports remains the biggest flaw.

In the U.S. an applicant must appear before an authorized government official. A voucher may also be required, as well as the birth certificate. And sometimes a second person must swear that the applicant is genuine.

It is not that the U.S. has more safeguards — it is just that Canada has none.

A rule requiring that a person apply in person before an authorized government agency seems only logical before issuing a passport. It is one reason why there is a move to put passports under the control of the immigration department, which has more facilities and bodies than external affairs.

After all, a driving licence requires a personal appearance. There is no logical reason either, why applicants shouldn't be required to have their fingerprints taken. Honest people should have no reason to fear being fingerprinted.

None of this will prevent Canadian passports from being misused in the future, but it will make it more difficult.

The Soviets have the only true control — they simply don't let their citizens have passports. When individuals (or more likely groups) travel, their passports are kept by the state.

When the Soviet traveller returns, his passport is confiscated at the airport or port of entry.

Security is easier in a dictatorship. No one would advocate that the Soviet practice be introduced here. But the laxness and casualness with which Canada hands out passports seems foolish and beyond defence.

Wittingly or not, Canada discourages immigrants — and encourages spies.

Chancellor Answers

West Germans Still Pursue Detente

By LESLIE COLFITT from Berlin

WEST Germans are asking themselves whether the entire concept of their country's eastern policy has been proved faulty by the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia. Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger gave the question an official answer last week: he said the policy of detente towards Eastern Europe would continue. What remained unspoken, however, was more important.

The coalition of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats in Bonn has no choice. It stated its reputation on the belief that East Europe had gained sufficient latitude from Moscow to conduct its foreign affairs. Now, West Germany will have to go through the motions of detente knowing that the reply will be in Cyrillic form. It will be a test of traits not usually considered typically German: tact, and the ability to turn a smitten cheek. But if West Germany can resist the temptation to fall back into the easier posture of anti-communism, it may one day expect to be rewarded by a grateful East Europe.

Right-wingers among the Christian Democrats and their Bavarian affiliates, the Christian Socialists, see no future in the government's espousal. Neither do the leading proponents of a get-tough policy towards the Soviet Union — Defence Minister Gerhard Schröder, Bundestag President Egon Gortner, and Economics Minister Franz-Joseph Strauss. But they have not been able to drum up much enthusiasm for their views. Interestingly, the otherwise highly critical West German press has refused to join them in sniping at Chancellor Kiesinger and Foreign Minister Willy Brandt.

Having reached an impasse in relations with East Europe, there remains the emotionally-loaded question of East Germany. The prospects of improved relations between Bonn and East Berlin are, on balance, even less hopeful than before August 21. Just before the invasion of Czechoslovakia, a shimmer of hope came in the form of an East German offer that economics officials from both Germany meet to discuss problems in inter-German trade.

West Germany grasped at the straw. A date and place for the meeting was not yet arranged when East German divisions moved into Czechoslovakia. Herr Kiesinger has since reaffirmed the government's willingness to have the meeting in either West or East Germany, but it is believed unlikely that East Germany will respond.

Virtually a reflex action by Bonn after Czechoslovakia had been invaded was to call for a stronger NATO. Herr Kiesinger joined in, obviously catering to the prevailing public sentiment.

A review of the — in fact — unchanged balance of power in Central Europe, however, resulted in a more dispassionate view. Herr Kiesinger then spoke of the necessity of an "increased readiness," and left it at that.

After the invasion, the right wing of the Christian Democratic Union vowed that its opposition to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty had been proven correct. It pointed for additional proof to the Soviet threats to intervene in West Germany under the "enemy states" clause of the UN Charter.

Herr Kiesinger refused to go along with this particular line of reasoning. Instead, he said the question of Germany's signing or not would have to be considered as a less heated atmosphere. As a wag in Bonn noted: "The Chancellor will sign, very, very slowly, but he will sign."

Predictably, Herr Strauss's Bavarian wing of the Christian Democrats called for the political and military union of West Germany with France. What Bonn is left with after Czechoslovakia is a sense of helplessness. Since Willy Brandt became foreign minister, West Germany has been enjoying — through its new Eastern policy — the feeling of being able to exercise its sovereignty which is so limited towards the West.

For once, it was not consulting with the Americans on an aspect of foreign policy. But now it appears certain that the old relationship between Bonn and Washington has been restored. It was like a re-run of a rehearsal from the Erhard era: German officials hurried off to Washington for assurances on U.S. troop levels and returned with detailed suggestions on the form West German payments for U.S. forces in Germany should take.

Another element crept into a conversation I had with an earnest young official of the Social Democrats, partners with the Christian Democrats in the ruling coalition. What would happen, he asked, if the extreme right-wing National Democratic Party (NPD) were to gain a bloc of seats in the federal parliament next year? Would the West still guarantee the security of Germany under such conditions?

The phrasing of the question struck me as odd, until I realized that even democratic-thinking Germans believe the extreme right wing has an irresistible appeal to the people in just such a complex situation as the present one.

Logically, the NPD, with its pronounced anti-American sentiments, would stand to lose in the face of an active Soviet military threat. Yet a growing number of Germans are dissatisfied with their country's role as Western Europe's largest political cushion.

This explains the reasoning of the young Social Democrat. Instead of the NPD itself being his main worry, however, he seemed more concerned about what the allies would do to protect the Germans against the Soviet in the event of NPD victory.

This lack of confidence in the ability of the established democratic forces in West Germany to deal with the hidden persuaders of the Right has led to pressure in Bonn to deal with the NPD by banning it.

I Beg to Differ...

So Who's Afraid Of Curtis LeMay?

By FRANK LOWE

WHILE the very thought of Curtis LeMay in a political context may frighten the wits out of a lot of people, I happen to know two people who aren't frightened of him at all.

These two are Mrs. Curtis LeMay, and her daughter.

The reason I happen to know this is that some years ago when Curtis LeMay was practically the world's keeper as head of the nuclear-armed Strategic Air Command, I was a guest in the LeMay home.

This came about because for several weeks I had been preparing a series of newspaper articles on SAC. I had flown in the bombers and talked with their commanders and munched about in their messes.

Then, one day while at SAC headquarters, I received an invitation to visit Mrs. LeMay. She had decided to have a look at this "foreign" newspaperman who had been hanging around.

The visit extended through the afternoon. Mrs. LeMay told me about the divorce problem in SAC where the married pilots were sent away for months at a time — with their wives never knowing where they were or when they might return, because of security reasons.

In the United States, it seems, the wife is supposed to be the backbone of every home. But that doesn't mean you trust a wife enough to tell her what her husband is, or what he is doing.

Anyway, time flitted by and, finally in the front door strode the Man himself — Old Ironpants. From what I had heard I almost expected that he would carry the H-bomb home with him every night — just as he would know where it was in case he needed it.

So imagine my surprise when, continuing these that in his own a boudoir bird welcomed him home, no man is the boss. Not hearseford by sitting on LeMay's shoulder, chirping bomb in his briefcase.

It worked, too. The general growled a bit more but finally, like a dying volcano, subsided. I am not implying with this anecdote that Curtis LeMay is a man of peace. Curtis LeMay has any political power, in fact, would scare the neighbors out of me.

It is merely part of my continuing thesis that in his own a boudoir bird welcomed him home, no man is the boss. Not hearseford by sitting on LeMay's shoulder, chirping bomb in his briefcase.

The RCMP patrol vessel, St. Roch, reached Vancouver 24 years ago today — in 1944 — after an 86-day voyage from Halifax through the Northwest Passage. She then became the first ship to have made the northern crossing of the continent both ways. She left Vancouver June 23, 1940, reaching Halifax Oct. 11, 1942, after spending two winters locked in Arctic ice.

1942 — Hurricanes killed 11,900 in Bengal, India.

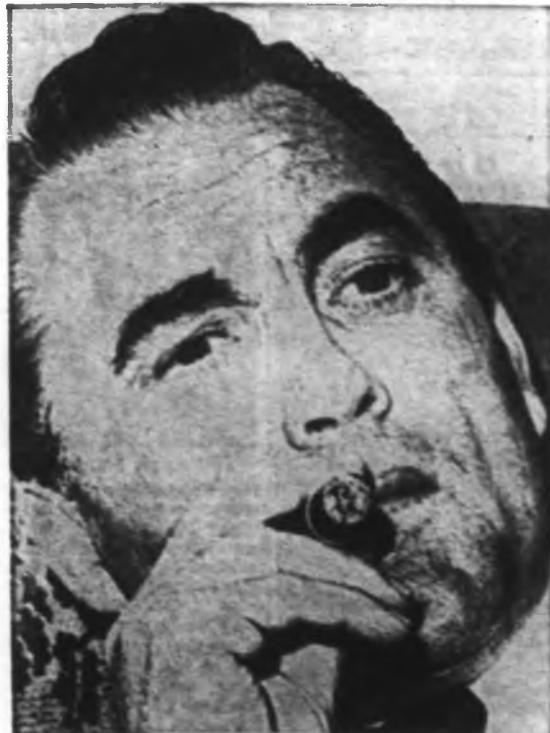

1950 — French forces in Indo-China abandoned 250 miles of the China frontier to Viet Minh nationalists.

First World War: Fifty years ago today — in 1918 — Allied forces under King Albert of Belgium captured Meuse, north of the Argonne Forest. American troops took Grand Pre and drove a wedge at Krienshilde, Gomer, Werville, Hallium and Wolvethem were occupied by the British 2nd Army.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today — in 1943 — The Allies announced the destruction of 104 Japanese aircraft in a series of battles in the southwest Pacific. The Swedish liner Gripsholm arrived at Mormugao, India, to repatriate 1,500 American, Canadian and Latin-American civilians who already had arrived from Japan aboard the Tetsu Maru.

'He Thrives on Turmoil'

Wallace

Platform Produced

UPI, from Seattle

George Wallace Sunday presented a 14,000-word American Independent Party platform which promised to help return to "from whence they came" those who are "totally unfitted" for big city life.

In many respects, Wallace's long-promised platform offered not a dime's worth of difference between what he promised and what the Republicans and Democrats have promised in their platforms and campaign speeches.

Like Hubert Humphrey, Wallace proposed a substantial increase in social security payments, and like Richard Nixon he promised to tie automatic social security increases to rises in the cost of living.

Wallace produced the document after speaking to a big crowd in a theatre in Seattle while several thousand overflow supporters stood outside in a downpour to hear his words piped over a loud-speaker.

In a preamble, Wallace declared that the "average American" was "dismayed" by political leaders who "dedicate themselves to minority appeasement as the country burns and decays. . . ."

The platform condemned politicians who "paid homage to the legions of dissent and disorder and worshipped at the shrine of political expediency."

Talking of persons who found unhappiness in the big cities, Wallace promised: "Those totally unfitted by training, background and environment for urban living who have been lured to the metropolitan areas by the wholly false promises and commitments of self-seeking political leaders must be afforded an opportunity for training or, in the alternative, an opportunity to return to gainful employment in the less urbanized area from whence they came."

On Vietnam, Wallace promised a speedy victory through the use of non-nuclear weapons if negotiations fail. The platform promised to reform the defence department and "eliminate from its ranks all of those who have been party to the dissemination and promulgation of the false doctrines of security and coercion, intimidation and punishment of all who would oppose or disagree with them."

At the smallest sign of a scuffle in a crowd, Wallace shouts: "Let the police handle it, let the police handle it. Those are some of the people this country is sick and tired of." It matters not that the trouble may have been started by Wallace supporters.

He blames the "anarchists" and the crowd cheers.

After Wallace calls attention to the scuffling, it sometimes erupts into fighting and he cries out: "Put the TV cameras on them, they just want to get on TV." The fact is that Wallace wants them on TV so the country can see the "anarchy" he has warned about.

Frank Freidel, a Harvard history professor, says the overstatements by protesters and Wallace supporters are usually outnumbered, several thousand to a few hundred.

"Wallace can come and go, although he is a particularly dangerous demagogue, but the backdrop of hecklers as a Greek chorus or foil could be especially dangerous in the long run."

Canada has set up its own

Under the Trading with the Enemy Act, the U.S. has its tightest for China, Albania, Cuba and North Vietnam.

Canadian firms, including those producing trucks, have turned down Communist orders in the past, Canadian officials say. They say many such rejections never come to light.

U.S. control over the export policy of U.S.-owned subsidiaries abroad, a touchy political issue periodically in Canada, should be applied generally to squeeze off Communist aid to North Vietnam, Senator Karl Mundt suggests.

The scheme would work in the same way that U.S.-owned mills in Canada several years ago refused to bid on flour orders for Cuba. U.S. companies abroad, under the Mundt plan, would be forbidden to deal with Communist states under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

U.S. net foreign investment abroad is "reaching beyond the extraordinary total of $30,000,000,000" the Republican from South Dakota told the Senate Monday before it adjourned.

Mundt has consistently been critical of U.S. allies trading with the East and particularly with North Vietnam.

He suggested that the list of commodities prescribed by the Trading with the Enemy Act be expanded to "the full 1,000 items or even higher for that matter."

"The application of this expansion of the list would also serve notice to our NATO allies that we mean business," he said.

He called it "heartening" that former vice-president Richard Nixon, Republican presidential candidate favored to win the Nov. 5 election, "grasps the significance of economic power."

"It was a tool that was not neglected in the war-ending and peace-protecting administration of former president Eisenhower and Nixon, Mundt said.

Unless Communist countries stopped aiding North Vietnam, the United States should start clamping down on trade by its overseas subsidiaries with the Communist bloc.

By JACK NELSON, from Atlanta
A former Alabama state senator who knew George Wallace well when he was governor once succinctly appraised his political abilities:

"He thrives on turmoil and when there's peace and quiet, he'll create turmoil. That's the danger in him. He's not handicapped by any deep principles and he can change 180 degrees to suit the political situation."

Wallace's third party presidential campaign accurately reflects the appraisal. The former Alabama governor is conducting one of the most turbulent and deceptive (and many observers believe most frightening) campaigns in the nation's history.

Newsman with long experience in covering politics and hecklers alike, have described the frenzied audience reaction as "chilling" and "scary."

And they have noted that Wallace can deftly change his views to suit the situation, as he has done in his remarks about the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Kennedy Ridiculed

Before Sen. Kennedy's assassination, Wallace frequently ridiculed him as "that fellow who advocated given blood to the Viet Cong," and equated Kennedy's comments about blood donations with treason.

Now, in criticizing dissenters who "advocate giving blood, money and clothes to the Viet Cong," Wallace calls Sen. Kennedy "the personification of legitimate dissent," and seldom fails to make the comment in northern areas where Kennedy was popular among labor union members.

Wallace also professes to have been an admirer of John F. Kennedy, but when Kennedy was president, Wallace accused him of consorting with communism.

And one of the last official acts of Wallace's wife Lurline as governor was to make a death bed appointment of a Kennedy hater to the Alabama supreme court — John Kohn, a Montgomery attorney who called the president "one of the most dangerous men in the history of our country" and said he was glad he had been assassinated.

An atmosphere of hate permeates every Wallace rally. And a growing number of people who ostentatiously abhor racism and extremism now sit with the white supremacists, the Birchites and other radicals, their faces contorted in anger, and applaud Wallace's formula of violence for dealing with demonstrators.

They cheer when Wallace threatens to run over demonstrators or to "do away" with them or to appoint an attorney general who will drag them by the hair and put them "under a good jail."

Trouble Relished

A consequence of Wallace's fiery rhetoric frequently has been fist fights between protesters and supporters or a police assault on disorderly demonstrators.

Although Wallace charges that news reports exaggerate violence at his rallies, he relishes the trouble and says it wins him votes. And it undoubtedly does — by underscoring his complaints of "anarchy" in the country.

At the smallest sign of a scuffle in a crowd, Wallace shouts: "Let the police handle it, let the police handle it. Those are some of the people this country is sick and tired of." It matters not that the trouble may have been started by Wallace supporters.

He blames the "anarchists" and the crowd cheers.

After Wallace calls attention to the scuffling, it sometimes erupts into fighting and he cries out: "Put the TV cameras on them, they just want to get on TV." The fact is that Wallace wants them on TV so the country can see the "anarchy" he has warned about.

Frank Freidel, a Harvard history professor, says the overstatements by protesters and Wallace supporters are usually outnumbered, several thousand to a few hundred.

"Wallace can come and go, although he is a particularly dangerous demagogue, but the backdrop of hecklers as a Greek chorus or foil could be especially dangerous in the long run."

U.S. Senator Revives Touchy Issue

By ARCH MacKENZIE, from Washington

U.S. control over the export policy of U.S.-owned subsidiaries abroad, a touchy political issue periodically in Canada, should be applied generally to squeeze off Communist aid to North Vietnam, Senator Karl Mundt suggests.

The scheme would work in the same way that U.S.-owned mills in Canada several years ago refused to bid on flour orders for Cuba. U.S. companies abroad, under the Mundt plan, would be forbidden to deal with Communist states under the Trading with the Enemy

Budget Balance Moral Must

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The government has a strong moral responsibility to hold its net cash requirements this year to $750,000,000 and to bring the fiscal 1969 budgetary position very close to a balance, says a Canadian bond market expert.

James H. Clayton, of Royal Securities Corp., believes this is necessary if institutional investors are to be persuaded back into the market.

If inflation is allowed to continue at its present rate, institutions will be forced into larger equity investment to minimize erosion of capital and income.

"It is a very real concern," says Clayton.

SIMPLE EXAMPLE

A simple example of the error that is being struck into the minds of bondholders is the action of the Canada 3% percent issue of 1966 not due for redemption until 1998.

An initial investment of $37 in this bond in 1966 now is worth only $62 on the current market, or 64% of the dollar if the buying power of the dollar is taken into consideration.

In addition, the $3.75 income from the bond is worth only $2.90 in today's dollar value, and what it will be worth in 1998 when the bond matures is anyone's guess.

FUND BUSINESS

Fund managers have turned to equities for protection, says Clayton, because there is no reward in the performance of the long-term bond market.

A survey of trusted pension plans by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has shown the percentage of bonds held in 1967 was 77 per cent and stocks 23 per cent. Today these funds more than doubled in book value, have only 53.8 per cent of their portfolios in bonds and 46.2 per cent in stocks.

BLUE CHIPS

CPR common is a typical blue chip example. It sold at $29 1/2 in 1957 and now sells at $70 (or $54 1/2 in adjusted 1957 dollars). Its dividends have risen from $1.90 to $2.90 a year (or $2.24 in constant dollars).

This represents a 30 per cent increase in real income, and an 85 per cent increase in real capital.

Clayton compares this with the 22.6-per-cent decline in real bond income and 50-per-cent decline in real bond capital on the Canada 3% of 1966, and "that is why fund managers have become apprehensive over bonds."

SHARP DECLINE

The loss of interest in the bond market and the sharp decline in prices since the government admitted it had not been able to contain its expenditures, have worsened the situation for borrowers.

Clayton says the federal government is sharing the cost of many social services with the provinces, over which it has little control. He claims the federal government must renegotiate its position with the provinces at the forthcoming federal-provincial conference to regain a measure of fiscal responsibility.

BONE PROGRAMS

He fears as a result, some of the 19 programs to relieve poverty may have to be squeezed off or stretched out in the process.

Apart from the disenchantment of investors, the weakening of bond prices is deterring corporate borrowers from making new loans of an essential nature at exorbitant prices, and it also wrecks the possibility of reducing home mortgage rates from their present high levels. The investor is not the only one who is getting hurt.

Royal and United will hold most of the stock in the privately owned corporation. A minor shareholder is St. Maurice Gas.

MAGAZINE'S MAIL WOES

The Canadian postal strike this summer may have cost Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd. about $150,000, according to the first report of the company since it became public earlier this year.

Paul Zimmerman, president, said about 75 per cent of the company's business depended on mail services.

The increase in postal rates announced recently would also have an effect on Reader's Digest profits and would require new measures to offset higher costs.

In the six months to June 30, chosen as a new fiscal year-end for Reader's Digest (instead of Dec. 31), Zimmerman said net income was $74,474, compared with $66,966 in the whole of 1967.

EXPENSES DEFERRED

Unaudited accounts of Captain International Industries Ltd. of Vancouver for the first six months of 1968 show development expenses of $232,400 after taking into consideration gross profit and interest earned of $66,967.

Captain manufactures automatic vending machines for use in hotels, and its Bell Captain has been installed in 1,000 hotel bedrooms. It is turning out 500 units a month at its Montgomeryville plant in Pennsylvania.

NEW BEER DEAL SEEN

Rumors that a new offer by Rothmans of Pall Mall to Canadian Breweries is about to be made reflected themselves in Tuesday's trading in shares of the two companies.

Canadian Breweries strengthened to $10 before closing at $9 1/2 while Rothmans was off $1.25 at $25.

Rothmans is anxious to increase its holding in Canadian Breweries from its 11 per cent, but its recent offer was withdrawn after opposition from Canadian Breweries shareholders was encountered.

The feeling on the street is that Rothmans will make a new offer more acceptable to Canadians.

It's a small price to pay to find out for sure about a car that could cost three or four thousand dollars.

Home Oil Company Limited has called for redemption ALL of its 5 1/2% Convertible Subordinated Debentures due 1984

If you own any of these Debentures, the following facts are of vital importance to you:

1. November 4, 1968 has been established as the redemption date. All Debentures not covered at the close of business on October 25, 1968 will be redeemed for cash at the redemption price of 104.6% of the principal amount of such Debenture plus accrued interest to November 4, 1968. The redemption value of each $100 Debenture, including accrued interest, will be $106.95. Interest on the Debentures will cease to accrue on November 4, 1968.
2. Each $100 Debenture is convertible into five (5) Class A shares of Home Oil Company Limited which currently have a market value greater than $106.95. As long as the market value of five (5) Class A shares is more than $106.95, holders of the Debentures will receive, upon conversion, Class A shares having a market value greater than the amount of cash which would be received upon redemption.
3. THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE EXPIRES ON OCTOBER 25, 1968. FAILURE TO CONVERT BY THIS DATE COULD RESULT IN A MONETARY LOSS TO YOU BY VIRTUE OF THE ABOVE DESCRIBED FACTS.
4. Debenture holders may convert the Debentures into Class A shares of the Company at the price of $20.00 (Canadian) by surrendering Debentures at the principal office of Crown Trust Company in any of the cities of Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, Canada or at the Chase Manhattan Bank (NA) (Corporate Agency Department), 80 Pine Street, New York, New York, 10015.

When surrendering Debentures for conversion, the APPLICABLE FORMS ON THE REVERSE SIDE OF THE DEBENTURES SHOULD BE DULY COMPLETED.

Red Subs Eyed By NATO

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — A new North Atlantic Treaty Organization naval command is being established to strengthen air surveillance over the growing Soviet submarine fleet in the Mediterranean Sea, it was announced Tuesday.

An official announcement said the new NATO command—to be called the Maritime Air Forces, Mediterranean—becomes effective Nov. 21.

Under plans approved earlier by NATO defence chiefs, United States, British and Italian naval planes will patrol the Mediterranean to watch for Soviet subs. Information will be shared among the three nations, plus Greece and Turkey.

Command of the new force will be under Rear-Adm. Edward Outlaw of Greenville, N.C., whose headquarters will be Naples.

Number of aircraft assigned to the new command is classified. But navy sources said they would be propelled or turbojet type craft capable of staying in the air for longer periods than jets.

Re-Sale Charge

ROME (Reuters) — An Italian businessman said to have sold American-made strategic equipment to the Soviet Union has been charged with political and military espionage, police said Tuesday.

Businessman Alfredo Catena was accused of selling equipment exported to Italy but banned from sale to communist countries.

The charge did not give details of the equipment.

Catena was arrested along with another businessman and two Italian foreign ministry employees two weeks ago. A member of the Soviet embassy's commercial section was expelled.

The two foreign ministry employees were charged with corruption and complicity in passing state secrets to a foreign power.

Volunteer Given LSD

LONDON (AP) — The defence ministry admitted Tuesday that British army volunteers have been given LSD in experiments to see whether soldiers could be put out of action by an enemy using the hallucinatory drug.

Social workers criticized the experiments at Britain's chemical warfare research centre in Wiltshire. Rev. John McNichol, founder of the National Association on Drug Addiction, told reporters:

"This attitude is dangerously similar to that of the Japanese in the last war. They convinced their young troops that death was irrelevant. In the Congo not long ago, troops were given marijuana to take away their minds. Is that what is happening here?"

ENEMY FORCE

Neville Gadsby, director of the research centre, said: "Our interest in LSD is that it could be used by an enemy force as an incapacitating agent. Therefore we must know all we can about its effects so that we can produce some sort of defence."

Gadsby said none of the volunteers were given more than one dose of the drug and "even that was the absolute minimum—a dose that the average hippie would not even consider."

World Court Suggested For Claims

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Philippines called on Malaysia again Tuesday to join in placing their rival claims to the Borneo state of Sabah before the World Court.

Philippines Foreign Secretary Narciso Ramos made the appeal in a policy speech before the United Nations General Assembly.

Earlier, Prime Minister Abdul Rahman told a special session of the Malaysian Parliament in Kuala Lumpur that tensions could be eased only if the Philippines accepts Sabah as a constituent state of Malaysia.

Asserting that his government would continue to press its 90-year-old claim to the former British colony, Ramos assured the assembly that it would do so "only by peaceful means."

We make gasoline. But mileage is our business.

Maybe the day of the gas station is past.

After all, when you stop at the Shell sign, we can do a lot more than fill your tank. Gasoline is just one factor that determines mileage.

And mileage is our business.

We can help you go farther

When you stop at the Shell sign, we can check your tires. The right pressure will give you better mileage.

We can check your spark plugs. If they're worn, you could be wasting one gallon in every tankful.

We can check your air filter. If it's dirty, that's more wasted gasoline—and money.

We can suggest many more gas-saving secrets. We want everything right with your car when we fill your tank, so Super Shell can really show off.

Super Shell for good mileage

It's a good mileage gasoline for one good reason: the formulation.

There are no secrets among Super Shell's ingredients. Most are in one competitive gasoline or another.

But no two refineries use all of the same ingredients in the same proportions.

Super Shell has five ingredients for good mileage.

(1) Platformate contains extra-energy petroleum molecules.

(2) TCP works to keep spark plugs from misfiring.

(3) Butane helps you start quickly. And the quicker you start, the less gasoline you use before you get going.

(4) A detergent fights deposits that can build up inside the carburetor. These deposits reduce mileage.

(5) Mixed Pentanes help your engine warm up quickly to prevent misfiring, bucking, coughing and wasted fuel—whatever the weather.

But as we said, gasoline is just part of the story. Mileage is our business.

We really should call them Shell mileage stations. Visit one—if you'd like to go farther.

Mileage is our business

Ottawa's Role in Nigeria

Third Hercules Sent

OTTAWA (CP) — A third Canadian Hercules transport plane has headed toward Africa to support two other Hercules loaned to the International Red Cross for its relief program in Nigeria, a defence department spokesman said Tuesday.

The aircraft left Trenton, Oct., Tuesday afternoon on a flight that will take it over Recife, Brazil, for a possible overnight layover. The aircraft could stop this stop and fly directly to Ascension Island, 1,000 miles off the African coast.

The spokesman said the third flight was scheduled to arrive at its destination no later than Thursday and possibly earlier.

The first Hercules carried 45 men and arrived in Lagos, the Nigerian capital, Monday. The second transport left Trenton Monday and was to reach Ascension Island today.

The second aircraft carried tents and other equipment for use by the Canadian Armed Forces crews. The second and third transports were to remain at Ascension pending a report on airstrip conditions in Nigeria.

The spokesman stressed that the first two Hercules are en route to the Red Cross, while the third remains attached to Transport Command and will be on the scene to supply and assist the first two aircraft.

The third Hercules is being flown by Capt. Jim Petrie of Ramsayville, Ont., and a crew of five. It is carrying 22 men and an assortment of ground-support equipment.

If the aircraft does lay over at Recife, it is scheduled to arrive at Ascension Thursday.

Witnesses Criticize Ottawa Inaction On Nigerian Front

OTTAWA (CP) — Two witnesses Tuesday criticized the Canadian government for what they said was lack of action in the Nigerian civil war situation.

Dr. E. H. Johnson, secretary for overseas missions of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, told the Commons external affairs committee that it would be a betrayal of the just society if Canada did not extend its good offices to Nigeria and rebel Biafra.

He said Canada should not intervene politically in the situation, but both Nigeria and Biafra had confidence in Canada and are looking to it to extend good offices.

PEACE GROUP

Bernice Malone of Montreal, director of the Canadian Catholic organization for peace and development, said voluntary agencies haven't the strength to carry on relief operations much longer. There was not enough co-operation between the Canadian government and Canadian voluntary relief agencies.

The external affairs department tabled before the committee a further report of the international observer team in Nigeria. Canada is a member of the team and its representative, Maj. Gen. W. A. Milroy, may testify here next week.

LARGE NUMBER

The report said a large number of persons in refugee camps the team visited in the area of a Nigerian division "are in state of malnutrition."

The team repeated that it has neither seen nor heard any evidence of deliberate wholesale destruction of the Ibo people by Nigerian troops.

Dr. Johnson said more than 500,000 civilians already have died in the civil war and that another 500,000 may be dead by the end of the year. At least 6-000 persons were starving to death every day and this was a "very conservative" estimate.

Dr. Johnson, last in Biafra in August, said the situation might have been settled before the war started if Britain had not given overwhelming support in arms to Nigeria.

Malone said the war will go on as long as the big powers continue to supply arms to both sides. The political problem must be looked at.

FOOD AID

"The real crucial thing is to end the war," Malone said. "It is nonsense to patch up people and blow them up the next day."

He also said he hopes Canadian planes will help move food into Biafra for Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency, and for the World Council of Churches as well as for the Red Cross.

Dr. Johnson said Canada should press the United Nations to make an inquiry into the civil war situation.

OTHER WAY

For Canada to look the other way and say the war was an internal affair would be a "failure of responsibility."

He also said the Nigerians put on their "Sunday suit" for the observer team. Both Lagos and London were "very eager to present a good image to the world."

Biafran Defence Stiffens

LAGOS (UPI) — A top federal Nigerian official said Monday overextended Biafran resistance had slowed down the Nigerian army advance and no quick end of the 15-month-old civil war was in sight.

Federal troops have shifted from their all-out drive from Umuahia, the last major city still in Biafran hands, to concentrate on consolidating previously won positions, the source said.

The Nigerian official said federal army officers had "unqualified admiration" for the fighting spirit of the Biafrans.

Nigeria's chief of state, Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, had boasted he would take Umuahia in two months, but with the target date only two weeks away, the official said it is unlikely the city will fall in that time.

The Biafrans are also getting an increased supply of arms. The source said many of the arms are coming from Gabon, but did not elaborate.

Secret Awards Presented To U.S. Subs

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The Navy has awarded secret citations to three Atlantic fleet nuclear-powered submarines for highly classified operations during 1967.

The Defense Department refused to disclose details about the awards to the attack submarines Pollack, Ray and Triton. But they presumably were engaged in intelligence operations or in dangerous decoy maneuvers against Soviet submarines seeking to trail American Polaris missile submarines to secret undersea firing stations.

A question submitted to the Pentagon about the citations brought only this reply Tuesday:

"Details of the three commendations and operations which merited them are classified."

ON LIST

The awards came to light only because the submarines were included on a list of Marine and Navy units which earned presidential or Navy unit commendations in the Vietnam war.

Their inclusion, apparently, was an accident since there is rarely any formal announcement of awards for classified operations.

Furthermore, questioning of Navy officers revealed that nuclear attack submarines have played no role in the Vietnam war. Indeed, it was learned that the three submarines were part of the Atlantic, not Pacific, fleet when they earned the commendations.

IDENTICAL WORDING

The three citations were virtually identical. For example, the Triton's read:

"For exceptionally meritorious service during a period in 1967, U.S.S. Triton conducted important and arduous independent submarine operations of great importance to the national defense of the United States. The outstanding results achieved during the highly successful operations attest to the exceptional professional skill, resourcefulness and ingenuity of the Triton's officers and men. Their inspiring performance of duty throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval service."

The Navy unit commendation is awarded only to ships and units which carry out particularly difficult missions in an outstanding fashion, generally

Maoists Claim Full Victory

China's President Thrown Out

TOKYO (AP) — Without mentioning him by name, Peking radio declared Tuesday that Liu Shao-chi, president of China, has been stripped of all his official functions in the Chinese Communist party and government.

"We have completely disposed of the anti-revolutionary elements led by China's Khrushchev into the wastebasket of history and he no longer has power and authority in the party and government," said a Peking broadcast monitored here and translated here into Chinese.

"China's Khrushchev" has been the epithet for Liu Shao-chi for almost two years during the struggle which has gone by the name of "great proletarian cultural revolution." It is used to brand him as a "revisionist."

"The declaration of proletarian victory," said the broadcast, "is therefore not just a claim but a fact."

That referred to a declaration some time ago that victory in the struggle against the foes of Mao Tse-tung had been completed with the imposition of "revolutionary committees" over all China's provinces.

The party, Tuesday's statement said, now must "concentrate on reorganizing itself by taking in fresh blood of workers and peasants and consolidate itself by purifying the class ranks."

Liu is chairman of government—in effect, president of China—and has also been vice-chairman of the party of which Mao is chairman.

There have been claims from Peking from time to time of Liu's downfall, but none thus far which claimed that he actually had been stripped of any office.

Egypt Opens Doors To Cooler Mideast

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad said Monday he favors carrying out all the steps to peace in the Middle East within three months if possible. He did not insist that the first step be Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab territory.

In an interview, he also indicated Egypt would let Israeli ships through the Suez Canal and the Strait of Tiran in the last stages of the settlement. He said Egypt is not demanding the return of the Gaza Strip to Egyptian administration but would let Palestinian Arabs dispose of it.

PRIVATE TALKS

Riad and his Jordanian and Israeli counterparts had been engaged in private talks with United Nations envoy Gunnar Jarring of Sweden on the shape of the settlement.

Jarring is working as UN special representative to the Middle East to try to settle issues arising from the Arab-Israeli war of June 5-10, 1967, in line with a UN Security Council resolution of Nov. 22 last.

GAZA STRIP

That resolution calls for Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and occupied sections of Egypt, Jordan and Syria; Arab acknowledgment of "recognized boundaries" for Israel; freedom of navigation through international waterways in the Middle East, and a just settlement of the Palestine Arab refugee problem.

In the UN General Assembly last Thursday, Riad said he had asked Jarring to propose a timetable for the implementation of that resolution.

"EVERY INCH"

He also said withdrawal of Israeli forces from "every inch of the Arab territory occupied by them" was among the highest of international obligations.

But in the interview, when asked whether he insists that the Israelis should withdraw before anything else is done, he replied: "No, I don't try to make any priority. I'm leaving that to Ambassador Jarring. I don't put any conditions."

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 19-year-old woman was given a new heart in the second such transplant in Argentina. Names of the recipient and of the donor were not disclosed.

Washington Suspends Contacts with Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suspended diplomatic ties with Panama Tuesday because of the military ouster last Friday of President Arnaldo Arias.

At the same time, the United States reiterated disapproval of Arias' call to arms while in the U.S.-administered Panama Canal Zone and expressed hope for a return to constitutional government in Panama.

The state department said it would begin consultations today with other hemisphere countries on possible recognition of the young military regime headed by Col. Jose P. Pimella.

Such consultations are provided for under the Rio de Janeiro Declaration of 1955 which is implemented whenever a military takeover occurs in any hemisphere nation.

Computer Tracks Suspect In Nearly-Fatal Accident

TORONTO (CP) — Police used a computer to help track down a suspect in a highway accident that nearly brought death Sept. 13 to two motorcyclists.

They turned to it after two weeks of investigation an accident in which motorcyclist Joseph Amadio, 37, and passenger Susan Ledingham, 17, were struck by a motorist and left covered with burning gasoline.

Witnesses said the car stopped after the accident and a man stepped out, then jumped back into the car and drove off.

Police said they found a car's insignia plate at the scene. The computer provided details on 960 such cars registered in the province.

Session Delayed Two Weeks

Surprises Mark Assizes

By A. H. MURPHY
The Victoria Law Courts were full of surprises Tuesday — including a general suspension of the fall assizes for two weeks.

Another unexpected development was a plea of guilty on a new charge by Robert Simpson, 22, who was found guilty last week by a Supreme Court jury of charges of armed robbery and theft. The decision came after a six-day hearing.

The new indictment Tuesday against Simpson was that he was criminally negligent in the operation of a car in which Robert Rickward died in a crash in View Royal on May 11. The negligence charge and the two others on which Simpson was convicted all followed an accident which was the outcome of a high-speed pursuit by Esquimalt police.

A police officer testified at the trial on the earlier charges that he chased a car containing three men until it crashed into a tree.

Robert Rickward, 30, died almost immediately and Roger McEwan, 22, died later on the same day. Simpson suffered a broken foot and ankle and head injuries.

postponement of a trial on charges of non-capital murder. Gary Hugh McWhirter, 24, and Frederick James Morry, 28, are charged with the March 15 slaying of William Bruce van Munster, 24, a hotel clerk who disappeared about the middle of March and whose decomposed and partly mutilated body was found by detectives off a dirt road near Prospect Lake.

Although no reason for the delay was made public, it was believed to be caused by some medical evidence being delayed. Court officials estimate the assizes will last well into November — something which has rarely if ever happened before.

The Morry and McWhirter trial is expected to take from 10 days to two weeks.

Indictment was preferred against Simpson, and the word was given that the Morry-McWhirter trial would not open until Oct. 28. The two men are charged jointly.

Fund Drive Nears One-Third

The United Red Feather Red Cross Appeal pushed past the 30-per-cent mark Tuesday, with a total of $198,033 collected up to the 5 p.m. audit.

An appeal spokesman reported the 30.2 per cent level as 1,100 residential canvassers began their house-to-house drive for $125,000 of the $633,000 target.

Hunter Defeats Bush On Raw Grouse Diet

A city hunter survived for five days in heavy bush south-west of Vancouver by shooting four grouse and eating them raw.

PO Brian McMillan, a navy electrician, said at his Victoria home Monday he got lost when mineral deposits deflected the compass he was using on his hunting trip.

Mr. McMillan and hunting companion John de Goede bagged a young bull moose out in the bush and the next day Mr. McMillan headed back into the wild country. He failed to rendezvous with his companion, and his ordeal began.

He estimates he walked from 8 to 30 miles before he was picked up Sunday by a search helicopter.

Despite his chilly nights in the damp snow, he reported for duty as usual Tuesday morning with the navy repair ship Cape Breton.

Area VD Count Doubles

More than twice as many cases of venereal disease have been reported in Greater Victoria so far this year than in all of 1967.

Metropolitan Health Officer Dr. G. M. Whitbread said Tuesday the outbreak of the disease has become so bad his department has drawn up a list of "known promiscuous women."

He said these women, all known VD repeaters, will be called in each month for automatic penicillin treatment. Dr. Whitbread said this is one of the best ways he knows of controlling the outbreak.

Dr. Whitbread told the metropolitan health board, "I don't know the reason for this sudden increase. There has been a general increase in venereal disease in Canada in the last two years, but no significant increase in this area until now."

Dr. Whitbread said most of the new cases are adults, particularly young adults, and not teenagers. There has also been a noted increase of VD among homosexuals, he said.

Police and private doctors are giving full cooperation to health officials, he said. One of the main aims of the health program is to identify and treat disease carriers.

The VD clinic at the health board office on Oak Street is open each morning between 11 and 12 and Dr. Whitbread is to study the feasibility of opening a clinic in the latter part of the afternoon.

He also told the health board he will report at next month's meeting on the possibility of enlarging the present educational program about the dangers of venereal infection.

During 1967 there were 12 cases of syphilis reported and 116 cases of gonorrhea. Up to Oct. 7 of this year there have been 18 cases of syphilis and 286 cases of gonorrhea.

After hearing a complaint that trailer parks and motels are causing pollution of dishes along the Old Island Highway, the board authorized the sending of a letter to trailer courts outlining new, tighter regulations on sewage disposal and asking them for plans to conform to these regulations.

The board also agreed to tests to ascertain if motels are contributing to the pollution problem, with a view to corrective action.

No-Fine System Working Well

The experimental "no fine" traffic violation system in Greater Victoria has worked well in its first two weeks, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Tuesday.

Mr. Peterson said the system, in effect since Oct. 1, had had encouraging results in the initial stages.

"It is of course too early to make a sound judgment of the program but the early public reaction to the introduction of the program is encouraging. Thus far it seems to be working well."

He said it was too early to say when the system would be expanded to cover other areas of the province.

"A lengthy trial period will be required to gauge the results," he said. This will entail "getting experience on issuance of violations and the no-fine process and also gaining experience of the disputes in court."

"We have had indication that some of the traffic violators are seeking to defend themselves. They are entering disputes to the violation report."

Weather Studied Before Ships Left

By DON GAIN

The commanding officer of HMCS Qu'Appelle told a court martial Tuesday his ship and HMCS Saskatchewan, which struck a rock at the entrance to Active Pass Sept. 8, were to have returned to Esquimalt by Boundary Pass if a visual passage of Active Pass was not possible.

The statement was made by Cmdr. Richard Ratcliffe at the court martial of Cmdr. Norman Jackson, captain of Saskatchewan.

Cdr. Ratcliffe told the court he and Cmdr. Jackson discussed the weather before leaving Vancouver and decided to return to Esquimalt by way of Active Pass. Asked if any alternate route had been discussed, he said, "Not specifically at this time," but added Boundary Pass was to have been taken if a visual passage of Active Pass was not possible.

The Saskatchewan struck a submerged rock in fog at the entrance to Active Pass the morning of Sept. 8.

In court martial proceedings, the captain has pleaded not guilty to three charges of negligence in connection with the grounding.

The court martial ended its fifth day Tuesday and continues this morning with an address from the Judge Advocate, Cmdr. H. C. Ferne of the office of the Judge Advocate General, Ottawa.

Summations were completed Tuesday by the prosecuting officer, Major D. W. Ward of the office of the Deputy Judge Advocate, Winnipeg, and by the defending officer, Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of the office of the Judge Advocate General, Ottawa.

Cdr. Henderson, in his summation, said the ship's captain made all proper decisions on information available to him and was not guilty of negligence.

First to testify Tuesday was Cmdr. Ratcliffe, an active defence witness. The Qu'Appelle was returning from Vancouver to Esquimalt with Saskatchewan the morning of the grounding and was sailing in line astern.

Lead Warship Clearly Visible

He said the visibility, while the ships were sailing south in Georgia Strait between 10:30 and 11:15 a.m., deteriorated from two miles to one mile.

After the two ships turned to enter Active Pass, the only thing Cmdr. Ratcliffe could base his visibility on was HMCS Saskatchewan, which was 500 yards ahead, he said.

The Saskatchewan was clearly visible ahead, but he was unable to see any land, he added. The Qu'Appelle was part way through its turn when the order to act independently came from the Saskatchewan, he said.

Asked by the prosecution what he did when he learned the lead destroyer was aground, Cmdr. Ratcliffe said he had a feeling of disbelief, but took immediate action to keep clear. He went half astern with both engines, then he swung around.

He had been adjusting his course to regain his track, he said on information from both his navigation and operations officers that he was two cables to port of his intended track.

"I presumed the (Saskatchewan) was doing the same thing," he said.

"You felt your ship was perfectly safe?" asked the prosecutor.

"No," replied Cmdr. Ratcliffe. "I was concerned and I was correcting, but my ship was not being hazardous where she stood."

Asked what he would have done if he'd been acting independently, instead of taking orders from the lead ship, he said there would have been a point at which he would not have proceeded into Active Pass.

"I'd have turned away to starboard and turned back into the straits and returned by Boundary Pass."

"Did your navigator have a blind pilotage plan for Active Pass?" the prosecutor asked.

"He was conducting one for training purposes," the Qu'Appelle's captain replied.

"I would not transit on a blind pilotage plan," he continued.

"A commanding officer would be very imprudent to transit the pass by blind pilotage."

Cdr. Jackson took the witness chair and explained his ship, the Saskatchewan, was a Phase III ship.

Number of Personnel Changes

Asked by the defending officer to explain the term, he said it meant his ship, following workups, would join the squadron as a fully operational unit.

During July and August there had been a number of personnel changes, he said.

The navigation officer left in early August and was replaced by the present one in mid-August.

"When you lose 60 per cent of your watchkeeping officers, you have a problem to face," the captain said. "It reduced my capability and I was concerned at the time."

He initiated a training program to bring his ship back to an operational state. He reported to his squadron commanders, both the present and the previous ones, and to the chief of staff for operations.

"They gave me confidence," he said. "They said this was a problem I was faced with but not an insurmountable task."

The day the ship returned from Vancouver to Esquimalt, the captain looked at his navigation officer's charts before leaving Vancouver.

Cdr. Jackson said, "and accepted his plan."

"I had confidence in this officer."

He said he and Cmdr. Ratcliffe discussed the weather forecast and said the ship would go by way of Active Pass, "if the forecast was indicative of the weather."

Cdr. Jackson told the court that at no time during the crucial moments before the ship grounded did he receive any indication from his navigation officer or operations officer that there was concern for the safety of the ship.

He said he received no report of a foghorn being heard and he couldn't recall hearing one himself. If he had, he said, he would have realized it was the diaphone at Georgina Point.

He said he had no intention of going through Active Pass blind, but rather visually with assistance from radar.

'Tide Must Have Had Effect'

When questioned by the prosecutor, Cmdr. Jackson said that as he was approaching the pass, he felt he was still working visually and that he would be conducting a visual passage through the pass.

He said he couldn't see land and "never did until after the bump."

Asked for an explanation of the error in the navigator's plotting, the captain said that on reconstructing it afterward, he decided "the whatever must have been late and the tide must have had an effect."

The captain, asked how far in one minute the ship would sail at a speed of 14 knots, replied a quarter of a mile.

In his summation, the prosecutor said a compounding of navigational errors caused the grounding of the Saskatchewan.

He said the master must take all precautions to safeguard his ship in any condition in which it might be placed. He said he had the right and duty to supervise his navigator because mistakes can be made when that officer is under stress or tired.

He faulted the navigator for having "only the scantiest of information" for his return by Active Pass.

"His charts were not corrected," he said. "They are required to be, but he hadn't done it."

He said this might not have contributed to the grounding, but it was indicative of the navigator's methods.

The prosecutor said the navigator missed his wheel-over position, didn't bother to calculate the position for wheel-overs when he had to change course, didn't take the tides into consideration, didn't determine the visibility, relied on a small-scale chart while approaching the pass.

"A prudent captain would have been concerned and would have asked questions and taken steps to take an alternate route and not go through Active Pass," he said.

All his behavior fell short of the standard, "and a very high standard," which is expected of the commanding officer of a ship, the prosecutor said.

The operations officer warned the bridge, and continued to warn the bridge, of what changes should be made, he said. The fact the operations officer's wife was with him did not interfere with his duties.

The operations officer didn't scream or yell, the prosecutor said, but one could hardly expect a naval officer to act this way.

Operations Gave Information

He just gave his information, the defence would admit, he believed it would be understood by the bridge.

"One wonders where Cmdr. Jackson would have turned back. He turned at 11:10 a.m. and three minutes later the ship grounded."

The ship would have covered three-quarters of a mile in this time, he said.

"Up to that time no decision had been made. It would have taken time to calculate the turn and make it and the ship would have been that much farther into the pass."

"Even if it had been on course, and hadn't grounded, it would have been too late."

The ship would have entered a fogged-in pass without a blind pilotage plan, he concluded.

The defending officer, in his summation, admitted the ship was hazardous, but this was all the duty of the commanding officer. The navigator didn't calculate tidal flow; that's his responsibility. The operations room was using blind pilotage. The men transferred to the ship were competent. They have to be, or they wouldn't have been transferred.

"The captain made all the proper decisions on the information available to him."

"It was sheer coincidence that at this particular time, all reports failed. There was no report from the blind pilotage, no report from the echo sounder."

The captain took action, he said, "not to avoid danger, but to regain his track."

There was no evidence of negligence on the part of Cmdr. Jackson, the defending officer concluded.

Four Seek Seat On Council

Four candidates will contest an Esquimalt municipal by-election Oct. 22, the same day as the regional hospital district referendum.

Nomination papers to fill a seat vacated by Ald. G. T. Horne, who went to Nigeria, were filed Monday by retired naval lieutenant Arthur Caldwell, 1147 Wychbury; educator Fred Dunford, 755 Matheson; fire prevention officer Arthur Mobs, 451 Lamson and Dr. John Rogers, 436 Grafton.

Polls will be opened at the municipal hall from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 20 with advanced polls from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 21 and 22.

In Saanich

Apartment Zoning Rejected

Saanich council Tuesday night rejected a rezoning bid for development of a 90-unit luxury apartment on 6.2 acres at the northeast corner of Richmond and Mayfair.

Council turned down the application from Ken Oliver, 3225 Beach, after a two-hour public hearing attended by 30 ratepayers mainly opposed to the project. The main council objection was that the building would not be suitable for that site.

Council agreed to resume two lots adjoining the Racquet Club of Victoria, 2864 Gordon Head Road, for sports and recreational facility use. It also approved rezoning a property at 5176 Cordova Bay Road for general commercial use.

Dumping Attacked In Sidney Parks

By NANCY BROWN

Sidney parks are in a disgusting state and are being used as town dumps, Ald. Norma Sealey said Sidney council Monday.

"Tulista Park is unacceptably bad," she said. "I've been down there on several occasions and it is a disgusting and disgraceful state of affairs."

Eastview Park has been allowed to go to weeds and shrubs which have spread to private property in the area, she said.

The Reservoir Extension between Henry and Mills needs grading, levelling and cleaning, Mrs. Sealey said.

"People who own vacant lots are required to do this and the town should follow its own by-laws," she emphasized.

Mayor A. W. Freeman said Tulista Park is in effect federal land. The government spent $1,000 on drainage and was to have filled the area, and added topsoil and seeds.

"My instructions to the public works department at that time were that there should be no dumping," he said.

DUMPING ALLOWED

"But it seems no matter how many instructions you give or how many signs you put up, dumping is still permitted."

"I feel it is at the stage where a bylaw is required to make it an offence to dump on municipal land."

Mrs. Sealey felt the public works department was to blame for a good deal of the mess.

"If Tulista was just tidied up, it wouldn't look so much like the town dump. We don't need to spend a great deal of money, we just need to do basic tidying and filling of dumping areas."

Council decided to continue the discussion at a closed meeting Thursday.

Hospital Vote Points Solved at 384-4444

Ratepayers who want to ask questions about the Oct. 26 hospital referendum may call 384-4444, a special answering service set up by the Capital Region Hospital Board. Members of the Gorge Road Hospital auxiliary will be on the phones from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. starting Thursday.

Sooke Byelection

Man, Trustees Drop Demand for Probe

A defeated candidate for Sooke school board has withdrawn his demand for an investigation into his allegations of irregularities in a Sept. 28 byelection.

At a Tuesday meeting the school board took no action on the charges by Claude MacDonald, Seagirt Road, Sooke.

Mr. MacDonald's first letter alleged people voted who were not entitled to, and ballot boxes were not sealed. He withdrew his investigation demand in a subsequent letter but did not retract his charges.

"This is not sour grapes on my part," wrote Mr. MacDonald.

An accountant, Mr. MacDonald lost his fourth bid for the school board to William Stephenson, 6675 Goodview, by a vote of 282 to 57.

Trustee Ardiel Wickham said similar allegations were made by Mr. MacDonald when Mr. Wickham was re-elected a year ago.

"I simply ignored him," said Mr. Wickham.

Trustee Fred Willway said 15 instant-elections were sworn in at the polls on byelection day.

The board received formal approval from the education department to proceed with construction projects in three schools.

The department authorized spending $13,884 on laboratories at Edward Milne high school, $11,279 on a one-room expansion of Colwood elementary, and $25,482 on a two-room addition to Savary elementary.

Trustees accepted the recommendation of superintendent Ernest Hyndman that the per-pupil allotment for library books be increased to $5 in the 1959 budget, from $2.75 for elementary pupils and $3.25 for high school students.

Lighthouse Bill Expands

Oak Bay council Monday approved a rezoning application from Lighthouse philosopher W. A. Scott, allowing him to turn property at 1001 Newport into a guest house and build a lighthouse on top.

Mr. Scott said the glass house would contain weather-recording instruments. Ratepayers who opposed the idea were assured by council the guest house would not be turned into a rest home.

Humphrey Hurt

McCarthy Added To Ballot

From UPI AP
Hubert Humphrey's drive for the U.S. presidency took a serious setback in one of three important U.S. court decisions Tuesday.

A New York state appeal court voted to keep on the Nov. 5 ballot the name of Humphrey's defeated Democratic rival, Eugene McCarthy. Humphrey aides said new appeals are planned.

Elsewhere:
● In Washington, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal by Robert DePugh, leader of the militant rightist Minutemen, against a prison term for illegal shipment of firearms.

● In New York, a U.S. appeal court refused to hear again Aug. 31 decisions in the Texas Golf Sculpture "insider" case. This upholds the court's ruling that eight individuals violated federal securities laws.

Next game: Friday — Vernon at Kelowna

Victoria Cougars proved over the weekend that this is to be a different season than their first in the R.C. Junior Hockey League.

Battling for three goals in the last period, the Cougars completed their four-games-in-four-days invasion of the Okanagan on Monday by gaining a 3-3 tie with Kelowna Buccaneers.

Coupled with a 9-2 rout of Kamloops Rockets on Sunday, the result gave Cougars four points from their rugged road test and left them at the top of the league tables with a three-point margin over New Westminster Royals.

ROYALS LOOK GOOD

Royals defeated the Essex 5-3 in Vernon on Monday but took a 10-2 lacing on Sunday from Penikese Bruins, who handed the Cougars their only loss of the season and again look like the club to beat.

Monday's affair in Kelowna was a riotous affair in which 112 minutes in penalties were called by referee Tony Winnick. Included in the total were eight major penalties, two game misconducts, one 10-minute misconduct and 21 minors.

LATE GOALS FOR TIE

Bailed by excellent goalkeeping in a game in which they had 51 shots, the Cougars finally got started in the second minute of the third period when Adrian Blais scored to cut the Kelowna lead to 3-1.

Murray Kennett and Grant Evans scored in the last four minutes while both clubs had two players in the penalty box for fighting.

The line of Bruce Cowick, Len Barrie and Evans did most of the damage in Kamloops. Cowick had three goals and an assist, Barrie a goal and three assists, and Evans three assists.

Oerter Repeats with Record British Hurdler Spectacular

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Al Oerter of the United States won the Olympic discus for the fourth consecutive time Tuesday, but Britain's David Peter Hemery snatched the confident U.S. track team with a spectacular victory in the 400-metre hurdles.

Hemery ran away from the field to win by four metres over Gerhard Hennige of West Germany. John Sherwood of Britain was third.

TOPPED EVERYTHING
Hemery's time of 48.1 seconds smashed not only the listed world record of 49.1 by Rex Cawley of the U.S., but also a pending record of 48.8 claimed by Geoff Vanderstock of the U.S.

The United States had never before failed to win at least one medal in the 400-metre hurdles, an event it has swept several times. Both Hennige and Sherwood were timed in 49.0.

Oerter, winner of the discus at Melbourne in 1956, Rome in 1960 and Tokyo in 1964, tossed the discus 212 feet 6 1/2 inches here to set an Olympic record. The previous mark of 207-1 1/2 was set by Jay Silvester of the U.S. in the qualifying round Monday.

EQUALS WORLD MARK
Luther Milde of East Germany took the silver medal with 206-11 1/2, and Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia the bronze with 206-5.

PREDICTIONS BOLD
True to medical expectations, the track record-smashing was still limited to the shorter distances.

Jean Wadoux of France led the field of qualifiers for Thursday's 5,000-metre final by winning his heat in a slow 14:19.8. Other heat winners were Nafai Temu of Kenya, the 10,000-metre gold medalist, in 14:20.4 and Kipchoge Keino of Kenya in 14:28.4.

CANADIAN QUALIFIES
Bob Finlay, a student at the University of Waterloo, also qualified by finishing a strong fourth in Keino's heat in 14:31.8.

The United States maintained its easy domination of the sprints as its three entries, Tommie Smith, John Carlos and Larry Questad, all slipped to victory in the preliminary heats of the 200 metres.

LOOKED STRONG
U.S. sprinters looked strong, too, as they qualified for the showdown battles later this week in all seven running events.

Three of Canada's four boys were eliminated in Tuesday's repechages, leaving only sculler Roger Jackson of Toronto to maintain the Canadian position in Olympic rowing.

Canada has won at least one rowing medal in each of the last three Olympic Games.

IRENE ELIMINATED
Sweden captured the silver medal and Italy, the dominant power in cycling at the last two Olympics, took the bronze.

Canada's faint hopes of track honors glowed even more dimly when Irene Piotrowski of Vancouver was eliminated in the women's 100-metre semi-finals. She was sixth in her race in 11.5, a disappointing time after the 11.3 she clocked in each of the two heats she ran Monday.

On the Xochimilco rowing course, Canada saw its hopes vanish of repeating the 1964 victory in the coxed pairs. Despite a desperate effort near the finish line, Jack Underhill of Ladysmith, B.C., and Lytle Gately of Vancouver, could do no better than fourth in their last-chance heat.

FAIL TO QUALIFY
The eight-oared crew from the St. Catharines, Ont., Rowing Club came fourth in a heat in which Czechoslovakia and the United States finished one-two to gain the qualifying spots.

The Vancouver crew of Darrell Sturdy and Bob Stubbs was eliminated from the double sculls.

Rowing in 80-degree heat and the thin air of this city, 7,347 feet above sea level, costumed several countries fell victim to illness or exhaustion.

John Richardson, a husky six-foot-four 200-pounder, was taken from the Canadian eight on a stretcher at the end of their race. Coach Gerry Lisner said he would have replaced him before the race if any substitutes had been available.

"I'd have substituted for him before the race if all my substitutes hadn't been racing today," Lisner said. "He isn't in shape. He's sick."

All seven U.S. boats are still in the medal hunt, also. Soviet oarsmen collapsed in the coxless fours and coxless pairs Tuesday and are out of these events.

Harry Jerome of Vancouver, who finished seventh in the men's 200-metre final, failed to get as far in the 200 metres Tuesday. He was eliminated when he trailed the eight-man field in a second-round heat in 2:14.

in the medal hunt, also. Soviet oarsmen collapsed in the coxless fours and coxless pairs Tuesday and are out of these events.

Harry Jerome of Vancouver, who finished seventh in the men's 200-metre final, failed to get as far in the 200 metres Tuesday. He was eliminated when he trailed the eight-man field in a second-round heat in 2:14.

Next game: Sunday — Hamilton at Ottawa and Winnipeg vs. B.C. Lions at Vancouver.

A Saskatchewan Roughriders, playing before a record crowd of 22,157 hometown fans in Regina, regained the Western Football Conference lead on Monday by defeating Calgary Stampeders, 19-13, in a nerve-jangling game.

Victory, coming on a late touchdown pass from Ron Lancaster to Gord Barwell, moved the Riders one point ahead of the Stampeders with three games left for each club.

Riding on the decision Monday was an almost certain first-place finish for the winning club. Saskatchewan closes out its season with games against Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Edmonton Eskimos and B.C. Lions.

TWO TOUCHDOWNS
Stampeders, never behind until Barwell took the 11-yard toss from Lancaster, got both their touchdowns from defence-back Frank Andruski, who blocked a punt to run 15 yards for his first score and then intercepted a pass on the last play of the second quarter and sprinted 56 yards across the line.

Larry Robinson was good on one convert try and got a point from a wide field goal attempt. Ron Stewart got the other Calgary point on a 67-yard punt.

TED BRIEFLY
Their defence team holding Stampeders to a net gain of 120 yards, the Riders got to 7-3 midway through the second quarter when Lancaster combined with Jim Worden for a 63-yard touchdown pass and Bill Woods converted. Stampeders

Cowichan XV Scores Win

DUNCAN—Cowichan defeated Castaways, 14-0, in the only first division Victoria Rugby Union match Sunday at McAdams Park. Goodwin Gormann, Barry Greenwell and Sandy Clark scored one try each while David Rose kicked a penalty goal and Derek Hyde-Lay kicked a convert to account for Cowichan's points.

Dave Clarke kicked three penalty goals to score all of Castaways' points.

City Angler Wins Derby

COWICHAN BAY—George Burrows of 1261 Highrock Avenue, Victoria, won the Cowichan Bay Thanksgiving Cobo Derby and the Harry Hobson Memorial Trophy for the biggest aggregate catch, 36 pounds, six ounces.

Burrows' 15-04 pound fish won him the day's first prize of $100 and was the derby's biggest fish.

Saturday's winner was Victoria's Mel Vance and Lorne Heglin of Shawnigan Lake won Monday's prize.

BONUS DAY
Coming Soon!

conceded a safety touch to tie the score just before Andruski made his scoring interception to put Stamps ahead, 15-9, to start the third quarter.

Jack Abendstern sliced the margin to three points midway through the fourth quarter with a 29-yard field goal, then Lancaster and Barwell clicked with less than two minutes left. Goods kicked the convert.

In Monday's other game, B.C. Lions defeated the Alouettes 13-4, in a dull affair played before less than 8,000 Montreal fans.

Lions again showed little on offence but their defensive crew, riddled by Toronto's Wally Gahler on Saturday, was the difference against the dis-sension-wracked Alouettes, who have now lost six in a row.

Rookie full back Jim Evenson gave the Lions 116 yards on the ground but the bulk of the B.C. scoring was set up by the defence team.

An interception by Jerry Bradley, who ran the ball back 32 yards, set up the first of Ted Gervais' field goals and an interception by Greg Findlay set up Evenson's touchdown.

Gervais kicked the convert, then got his second field goal after setting it up with a 21-yard run from punt formation.

Alouettes got 172 yards in the air but the Lions threw quarterback Carroll Williams for 66 yards in losses. Findlay snailing him once for a 35-yard loss.

to win their three remaining games and have Hamilton Tiger-Cats lose three in a row to make the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Victory did the Lions no more good than to boost their margin over the last-place Blue Bombers to three points. Edmonton Eskimos made sure of the third playoff spot in the West on Sunday with a 28-9 rout of the Bombers in Winnipeg.

That left Eskimos six points ahead with three games left for the Lions but two victories in three games with the Lions would give the Edmonton club third place in the unlikely event that the Lions managed a point tie.

In Sunday's other game, Ottawa Rough Riders bounced back to the top in the East with a 36-23 win over the Tiger-Cats in Hamilton.

Russ Jackson led Ottawa to a 25-1 lead in the first half with a brilliant display of passing. Margene Atkins scored on 47 and 50-yard pass plays and Whit Tucker once on a 29-yard toss from Jackson.

Rookie Vic Washington got the other two Ottawa touchdowns. Don Sutherland picked off five converts and got a single point on a wide field-goal try.

Behind, 36-1, late in the third quarter, Tiger-Cats came back with an aerial attack in which Joe Zager threw touchdown passes to Dave Viti, Dave Fleming and Willie Bethea.

Western Division lead in Sunday's featured American Football League game.

With flanker Lance Alworth and placekicker Dennis Partee in starring roles, San Diego Chargers came up with a 23-14 win before 53,557 Oakland fans.

Alworth caught nine passes for 182 yards and one touchdown while Partee kicked three field goals and two converts.

Result enabled Kansas City Chiefs, 13-3 winners over Cincinnati Bengals, to move ahead and dropped Oakland into a second-place tie with San Diego, a half game out of the lead.

B.C. Ladies Capture Tournament

WINNIPEG (CP)—British Columbia's 'A' team polished off Manitoba-Saskatchewan, 7-0, Monday to win the Canadian Women's Field Hockey tournament undefeated.

In other final games of the four-day event, Ontario 'B' blanked the Maritimes, 2-0. Ontario 'A' shutout Quebec, 2-0, and B.C. 'B' defeated Alberta, 4-0.

Ontario 'A' finished second in the tournament with five wins and two losses; B.C. 'B' was next with four wins, a loss and two ties; Ontario 'B' was 3-4; Quebec 2-3; Maritimes 1-3; Alberta 1-4; and Manitoba-Saskatchewan had six losses and a tie.

Karl Zwick Wins At Uplands

Karl Zwick of George Vale Golf Club won the annual Thanksgiving Day golf tournament at Uplands Golf Club Monday shooting a two-over-par 72 to go with his five handicap for a net score of 67.

Cedar Hill Golf Club's Doug Pearce, with a 16 handicap, shot an 86 for a 70 net and second place. Warren Cameron and Bill Wyatt, both from George Vale, and Robert Hamilton of Glen Meadows tied with net 15 however, Cameron was placed third and Hamilton fourth because of better back nines.

Lex Sutcliffe of George Vale won low gross with a 74, one stroke ahead of Uplands' Michael Perks. Ray Saxton of Cedar Hill took third on a better back nine than Tom Mafteck of Royal Colwood. Both golfers had 76.

Prize winners may pick up their scripts from Uplands pro shop.

Rams in the Coastal Division by whipping San Francisco 48-0, 43-14. Units, who missed the first four games because of arm troubles, made his first appearance in the fourth quarter and promptly threw a scoring pass to John Mackey.

Meanwhile, the ranks of the unbeaten were trimmed to four, when Atlanta Falcons ended an 11-game losing streak by surprising New York Giants, 24-20. Perry Lee Dunn's second touchdown of the game produced the winning points in the fourth quarter.

Defeat cost Giants a share of first place in the Eastern Conference Capital Division. Dallas Cowboys, who are averaging almost 40 points a game, took over by thumping Philadelphia Eagles, 34-14.

Green Bay Packers are still tough, but whether the defending National Football League champions are still tough enough to handle improved opposition is beginning to seem unlikely.

An interference penalty against Herb Adderley in the closing seconds of a game in Milwaukee Sunday brought Packers their third defeat in five games and dropped them into third place in their division.

GOSSETT HITS

The penalty gave Bruce Gossett a chance to try for a field goal, and he made good from 27 yards to give Los Angeles Rams a 16-14 victory. Packers were forced to play without quarterback Bart Starr, who pulled a muscle in his throwing arm in the pre-game warmup.

Packers, however, got unexpected help from the New Orleans Saints, who upset Minnesota Vikings, 20-17, in a game in which the losers completed only nine of 28 passes for 51 yards.

FAIR OUTSTANDING
Result kept Vikings from pulling two games ahead in the Central Division of the Western Conference and forced them to accept a first-place tie, at 3-2, with Detroit Lions.

Lions got three touchdowns and a 23-yard performance from Mel Farr in bowling over Chicago Bears, 28-10.

Baltimore Colts, who finally got a chance to use Johnny Unitas, kept pace with the ing New York Giants, 24-20. Perry Lee Dunn's second touchdown of the game produced the winning points in the fourth quarter.

Indicted

Halfback Leroy Sledge of the B.C. Lions was one of 11 men indicted yesterday in Richmond, Va., on charges of draft law violation. District-court judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., authorized a bench warrant for Sledge's arrest and set his bond at $5,000 after the charge of failing to report for induction in the U.S. Army. Sledge said in Vancouver that he "knew nothing about it."

Still Has Hopes

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston of Las Vegas, Nev., kept his title hopes alive Monday night with a third-round knockout over Sonny Moore of Dallas.

They started the second half and Westminster both have two games in hand.

...and doesn't know a thing about NHA

But it's understandable. NHA is short for National Housing Act, which still doesn't begin to tell you about all the activities made possible by this vital piece of Federal Government legislation.

For example, NHA is directly responsible for many student residences and a lot of low-rent housing for low-income families. It has also become involved, necessarily, with land assembly... urban renewal... and a wide range of research and developmental activities. It has even aroused new interest and financed action in the pressing fight against water and soil pollution.

In short, NHA is vitally concerned not only with the home you live in, but the kind of environment your home lives in.

Gregoire applauds Levesque

Free Quebec State New Party's Aim

QUEBEC (CP) — More determined than ever to get Quebec out of what he called "the crazy-house" of Canadian federalism, René Levesque emerged from the long weekend with a new political party intent on making a sovereign French state out of Quebec province.

Levesque's new party called "Le Parti Québécois" was founded at a four-day convention uniting the forces of the former Quebec cabinet minister's Mouvement souverainiste association and Gédéon Gregoire's Ralliement national.

COMMON MARKET
If it gained a majority of seats in the 106-seat legislative assembly in a provincial general election, Le Parti Québécois would declare Quebec's sovereignty and seek to negotiate an economic common market with the rest of Canada.

Inside Quebec, the party would:

- Guarantee state schools for the English-language minority, but English-speaking Quebecers would virtually be forced to work in French in a state that recognized only French as an official language.
- Introduced legislation to make French the working language "in all enterprises" and give English-speaking Quebecers five years to adjust to life in "the country of a French-speaking people."
- Clamp state control over the communications and drug industries, put doctors on the state payroll and make all hospitals, clinics and medical centres operate as non-profit institutions.

Levesque closed the four-day meeting Monday by urging Quebecers to rid themselves of the federal system which he variously described as "Enlightened," "used up," "worn out," "paralyzed," "abnormal," and "literally a crazy house."

At a news conference, Levesque forecast that his new party, which claims a membership of 20,000, would hold the balance of power after the next election. He said he expects the next election to produce a minority government with the new party balancing power between the Union Nationale and Liberal parties.

FOUNDING MEETING
Levesque said he does not think the policies adopted at the founding convention will help bring into the new political formation the separatist Rassemblement pour l'indépendance nationale, which disagrees with Levesque's views on education rights for the English-speaking minority.

URGE POLICIES
Among other policies adopted at the convention were:

- Introduction of a priority measure of a complete, universal and obligatory system of medical care insurance and a state board to control "monopolies, distribution, publicity and prices of pharmaceutical products."
- Foreign capital will be welcome, provided foreign companies include a majority of Quebecers in the local management and reinvest "a part of their profit" in Quebec.
- Companies would be obliged to deal with their employees in French by a non-negotiable clause in labor agreements and would be obliged to establish collective agreements providing "at least the prevalent rate of wages in the sector involved."

● Film production and distribution companies, along with private radio and television stations, would have to be under majority ownership by Quebecers. A state film centre would control distribution and production of films.

More French Lessons?

MAILLARDVILLE (CP) — The French-Canadian Federation of British Columbia has asked that French as a language of instruction be expanded to include other B.C. school districts in addition to Coquitlam.

A resolution, passed at the federation's weekend congress, singled out Vancouver and Terrace, B.C., 450 miles north of Vancouver, as the school districts that expansion should include first.

"We want to widen the French language instructional program to other schools outside of Coquitlam," said Romeo Paquette, the federation's secretary-general.

"We want to give the same opportunity to people who want to take advantage of such a program in other school districts," he said Vancouver was chosen because of its cosmopolitan base and Terrace was selected because of a recent heavy influx of French-speaking Canadians.

Coquitlam, which has 1,000 students of French-Canadian background, began B.C.'s first French-language instructional program this September with a kindergarten class of 30.

If you're casting a wider shadow these days you could be in trouble

People in our "Stress Society" tend to over-indulge and as a result overweight and high blood pressure are common problems. If you're in your 40's or 50's the odds are high you have one or both of these problems. If you identify yourself with this group you'd be wise to do something about it. Like getting regular check-ups, finding out your limits, and sticking to them. If you've been thinking about life insurance, and discovered that the cost in your case is high, or even difficult to get, Manufacturers Life may be able to help. We have always believed that life insurance should be available to the largest group of people possible and at the lowest possible price. You will find the Man from Manufacturers well qualified and helpful in your selection of a plan to suit your particular needs. Call him soon.

Trudeau Bars Interference

PARIS (CP-Reuters) — Prime Minister Trudeau says in an interview published here that he hopes France will continue to help Quebec, but she should do it without interfering in Canadian constitutional problems.

He also indicates that French President de Gaulle lacks a sense of political reality in his statements on Quebec's place in Canada.

In an interview in the mass-circulation newspaper France Soir, Trudeau defends Canada's record of bilingualism.

The fact that French-speaking Canadians carry out their business in English in many areas was not the result of actions by the federal government.

Instead, "it is the result of the policy practiced for a hundred years by the governments of Quebec province."

Caouette Discounts Clash with Manning

OTTAWA (CP) — Creditiste leader René Caouette says he does not anticipate clashing with Social Credit Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta when the Quebec-based Ralliement Creditiste party attempts to find support in western Canada.

Caouette said militant creditistes, who sought to condemn Manning for the appeal he launched a year ago for the regroupment of conservative forces in the country, were on the wrong track.

At a news conference at Sherbrooke, Que., Sunday, it was brought to Caouette's attention that Marcel Jones of Moose Jaw, Sask., newly-elected director of the Ralliement Creditiste, said he would fight Manning in his effort to relaunch a federal Social Credit party in western Canada.

"Mr. Jones won't settle anything in this manner," Caouette said. "Anyway, Mr. Manning has announced that he will retire sometime in the month of December, I believe. He'll return to preaching the Bible and he won't be involved with the Social Credit movement."

Caouette praised the Alberta Social administration and the role Manning has played during his 25 years as premier of the province.

"Alberta, which has no provincial debt, is one of the most prosperous provinces in the country," he said.

Creditistes Urge Taxing Changes

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — A resolution providing that all Canadian provinces be given exclusive jurisdiction to collect personal income tax, corporation taxes and succession duties was adopted by a work-committee at the weekend annual convention of the Ralliement des creditistes.

A social Credit government, the resolution said, would give the province these taxation powers so that they could carry out their responsibilities in their own fields of activity as provided for under the constitution. The resolution added that this move would eliminate the sources of all conflicts between Ottawa and the provinces since the federal government would be barred from provincial fields of competence.

The taxation formula adopted by the workgroup committee at the Ralliement's 11th annual convention is similar to the one originally asked for by Social Credit Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia,

BE WISE... IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!

When Fran Davis toured the province with his Centennial Year version of the Barkerville show, halls were filled to capacity and extra dates had to be arranged to satisfy patrons who could not get tickets.

He played the current version of the gold town perennial on Saturday and Sunday night for members of the Club 44 at CFB Esquimalt and got an ovation.

There has been a number of changes in the cast and there is some new material, but not enough to spoil it for those who like their comedy from the vintage years of vaudeville.

Naturally, Mr. Davis carries the comedy load, but he gets lots of help from Louise Gennie and Gillian Campbell. Miss Gennie has a number of good sketches, and her version of a silent movie heroine played on the flicking screen is a knockout.

MAXIMUM EFFECT
Miss Campbell does a Cockney singalong that includes 'My Old Man Said Follow the Van, and Hang on the Bell, Nelly. She gets the maximum audience participation.

Top banana Davis has an able and talented accompanist for his gags and impersonations in the company pianist, Mrs. June Day. Mrs. Day manages to do all the wrong things at exactly the wrong time to get the best out of Mr. Davis's material.

For the sixth year, Tom Hawken is playing his banjo and also inviting the audience to sing along. He is as well received as ever.

WITH SHOW
Tink and Judy Robinson have just completed a two-week engagement at the Red Lion after being with the show all summer.

They sang and danced together and did a comedy spot with Fran Davis that went over very well.

There is a strong possibility the show will tour Vancouver Island in the near future, and it

Student Group Eyes Nationwide Strike

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—The Students for a Democratic Society's ruling body called Sunday for a nationwide student strike and big city demonstrations, coinciding with the Nov. 5 United States presidential election.

The SDS' national council voted the two-fold plan to express its disdain for the presidential campaign and the election process.

The plan for a student strike and regional demonstrations was adopted over competing proposals to mount an election day march on the White House and to seek ways to educating the public without election day demonstrations.

Pig and Whistle Show

By BILL THOMAS

The British have never liked their beer on ice, so they could hardly be expected to enjoy the situation when the entire pub was offered on-the-rocks.

The Pig and Whistle variety show played to a sprinkling of patrons Monday in Memorial Arena, and nothing could have put sparkle in the ale.

It is a really enjoyable show. It has pace, zest and drive, but could anyone hope to create the intimacy and warmth of an English pub and its music in the cavernous building?

VENTAGE COCKNEY
Host John Hewer sets the pace with broad patter and some vintage Cockney songs. He never allows the show to flag or falter. There are 25 items on the program and they seem to speed away.

Host Hewer gets able help behind his bar from Kay

Turner, who sings comic songs and gets the audience into the act with some of the gems that have survived two wars.

Probably one of the reasons for the success of this show is the Carlin Showband led by Chris O'Toole. This group backs the show and also provides some of the featured singers.

They add depth to the programming with a variety of Irish songs.

SCOTTISH SONGS
The killed Hugh Hagan gives the Scots their money's worth with such songs as 'Take Me Back and the Northern Lights of Aberdeen. Just to keep the show in balance, John Patterson sings the Welsh favorite, 'All Through the Night.

Queen of the Pearlies, Anita Scott, is a veteran entertainer who toured the Middle East to entertain the troops. She knows all the old songs and her timing of the comedy spots is perfect.

Oh Dad, etcetera

Comedy Guild Opener

Some plays are content with short titles like Hamlet, but American playwright Arthur Kopit has gone to the other extreme. His comedy titled Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad, will open Saturday to start the Victoria Theatre Guild's season.

Director Rod Symington has featured Helen Smith, Tony Nicholson, Jean Paul Desrobes, Sylvia Clark and Michael Williams in this first production.

The Theatre Guild has spent $8,700 on renovations to the theatre and all but the electrical work has been done by volunteer help. Changes include a $3,000 electrical job, new stage, new seats and a change of decor.

Mr. Symington, an instructor in German at the University of Victoria, has had extensive experience in radio theatre and stage production.

Before coming here he was active in theatre in Montreal. He has worked with the modern American theatre idiom and has produced Two for the Seesaw and Constantine Smith. The comedy Oh Dad, Poor Dad will run from Oct. 19 to 25.

Glue-Sniffing Laws In Works

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro told the Commons Tuesday it is difficult to control juvenile glue-sniffing by law, but Solicitor-General George McRae said a Criminal Code amendment is under consideration.

Lloyd Francis (L-Ottawa West) referred to the death in Ottawa last week of Raymond Champagne, 10. An autopsy found he died of sniffing the kind of glue used in model airplane building.

Munro said legislation will be introduced in the near future.

Humphrey Would Stop North Bombs, 'Period'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hubert H. Humphrey, elaborating on his Vietnam stand, said Tuesday he would stop the bombing of North Vietnam "period."

The Democratic party candidate for election as U.S. president Nov. 5 said at Kansas City it is necessary for the U.S. to take risks for peace—"we take risks on the battlefield every day."

"I said I would stop the bombing as an acceptable risk for peace, period," he said later at Salt Lake City, Utah.

"Period, not comma or semicolon. I also said in making this decision I would look to evidence by word or deed... directly or indirectly, that North Vietnam should restore the demilitarized zone."

Humphrey also called his Republican rival, Richard M. Nixon, "chicken-hearted" for declining to debate with him on Vietnam and other issues.

Nixon said Humphrey is starting to panic and that third-party candidate George Wallace has peaked below 20 per cent of the popular vote.

The Republican said that he will win every U.S. state in the election.

The public opinion polls continue to show Nixon a heavy favorite in the election.

Humphrey told an audience of students, Negroes and older folk that Nixon in the 1962 election campaign had sought to play on people's fear of communism and "now he's playing on people's fear of crime and violence."

Shooting Into Prisoners 'A Proper Way to Act'

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, work in the fields, has only a few fences around the main buildings.

Monday's shooting incident propelled the state prison system, rocked by scandal in the past, into Governor Winthrop Rockefeller's re-election campaign. His opponent, Democrat Marvin Crank, said the shooting was an example that the administration's talk of prison reform "is a phrase instead of a reality."

Three skeletons were found in unmarked graves at Cummins last January. Pathologist reports were inconclusive, but then Superintendent Thomas Murton said he believed the bones were those of murdered men.

His 16,000-acre prison farm, where hundreds of prisoners

LATER FIRED

Murton later was fired by Rockefeller's prison board, some thought for his views on the skeletons, and replaced by Urban.

Until recently there were few paid guards at Cummins. Armed inmates guarded unarmored inmates through a trusty system in which at one time a monetary payoff bought a better job or a better bunk. There are still some armed inmates.

About 120 prisoners refused Monday to go to work in the fields to pick cucumbers.

The latest findings of a hilarious survey research project point out that if all the cars in Los Angeles, New York and Chicago were placed end to end, some driver would pull out and try to pass.

"Two newly arrived immigrants to Canada were riding a train. A vendor came through the car and each bought a banana. A fruit vendor had seen before. Just as one of them started to eat his banana, the train went through a tunnel."

"Banana," he said, "have you started to eat yours yet?"

"No," answered Hans. "Why do you ask?"

"Better not," said his companion. "I started to eat mine and I've gone blind."

Women Status Needs Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report to President Johnson on the status of U.S. women calls for more day-care centres, upgraded household jobs and a better attitude by men toward equal employment opportunity for women.

In a report summing up progress during the last five years, the inter-departmental committee of the status of women declared U.S. women have greater opportunities than ever before. But it added "the issue is to what extent they will use them."

Moreover, the committee said, "the achievement of employment equality still requires many changes" in the attitudes of men despite many new federal and state laws aimed at ending discrimination because of sex.

The report disclosed statistics showing half the women in the U.S. between the ages of 18 and 64 are either employed or looking for work.

Job opportunities have increased in almost all occupations during the last five years, particularly "in professional and technical work and in clerical fields," it said.

Nevertheless, the report said, "many women are still concentrated in relatively disadvantaged positions," recommended more day-care centres "not only as an aid to working mothers but as a valuable child development experience."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: When I read your recent plug for Late Motherhood my nervous cough which had not bothered me for years suddenly reappeared.

My mother was 43 when I was born so I think I can speak with first-hand knowledge. Here's how it looks from here.

We "late dividends," as you so lovingly call us, usually lose our fathers when we are in our teens. They die of old age. We never know a grandparent. They usually die before we are born. Our widowed mother does not associate with the mothers of our friends because they are separated by approximately 20 years.

If we want to marry we must either take mother in or move in with her. She is too old to leave alone. (Guilt?)

Please, Ann, let this subject alone. Children are for parents in their 20s. People in the 40s should have grandchildren. — HORSE'S MOUTH

Dear Mother: When a woman 41 writes to say she is in her sixth month and feeling rotten about it I am not going to tell her to go jump off a cliff.

Some Good Points But . . .

You've made some good points and I don't deny it, but it's amazing how many women have written to say their late baby was the one who gave them the greatest pleasure.

Dear Ann Landers: Every morning at 7:15 our neighbor who works in the same office with my husband drops by to give my husband a lift. This has been going on for 18 months. I know the routine by heart. He says, "Just give me coffee." Then he winds up reaching for the muffins, the rolls, the berries, the cereal — everything in sight. When we have bacon and eggs he says "My, that smells good. Just one egg for me, please."

The office is 12 short blocks from here and a nice bus runs by our house every 20 minutes. It goes straight past the office.

This clown has a strong, healthy wife who likes to sleep in the morning. I am getting so I hate the sight of him. My husband says he is no extra work and, besides, the ride in the morning makes it a fair deal for everyone. What do you say? — SHORT ORDER COOK

Dear Cook: Tell your husband the walk to work in the morning will add years to his life and the novelty of not having company for breakfast will add zest to yours. When the weather is bad he could make an exception, but a daily boarder at dawn is like forget it.

Woman Joins Iran Cabinet

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — For the first time in its history, Iran has a woman cabinet minister. Mrs. Faroukhshahi Parast, 46, succeeded Hadi Hedayati as minister of education after his removal over differences with the ruling party leadership.

ERMA BOMBECK Offers Guidelines

Calendar Wrong Meeting Timer

The other day I sat through a mini-meeting whose purpose was to plan a larger meeting whereby plans for the big annual membership could be made.

I will not say the meeting was too long. I will only say my fingernails grew $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch. It occurred to me that some leaders in their genuine zest and enthusiasm for what they are doing are over-tired. I am always suspicious of a chairman who enters a meeting in a pair of flats, with a bottle of vitamin compound, a calendar and a tank of oxygen strapped to her back.

That is why I have set down some guidelines for chairmen.

• Nine out of ten leading doctors in an impartial survey have concluded that a hasty breakfast, a tight girdle and a long meeting create gas.

These three factors when blended together can actually simulate a heart attack. All the symptoms are there. So remember, a woman having a heart attack is an unattractive listener. Keep the meetings short.

• New grandmothers should be given maternity leave. For at least a year and a half they will dominate meetings with such provocative whispers as, "Junie slobbered his first slobber today," and "Here's a valise of pictures showing Little Leroy with din din in his hair."

They're hard to resist, but in all fairness to your group's work, they should be given sabbatical.

• Keep reports to a minimum. I once sat through devotions that made Charlene Heston sound like an atheist.

• This also holds true of introductions. When introducing a chairman or a speaker, it is not necessary to report that she underwent childbirth without sedation or that her hobbies are taffy and swimming.

• Finally, just a few words of caution to chairman everywhere.

You'll know you've been talking too long when the audience not only looks older, they are older.

You'll know you've been talking too long when someone gets up to leave and the folding chair has grown fast to her derriere.

You'll know you've been talking too long when your tongue falls asleep while you're using it.

Meeting adjourned.

Leftover Variations Intriguing

Pythians Planning Fall Bazaar, Tea

There are so many interesting ways of using the leftover Thanksgiving turkey and ham. That is assuming you had a bird or ham or both. Please don't just go on eating cold turkey all week.

Haven't a name for this turkey-ham-broccoli mixture, but it's a good way of using both leftover turkey and ham. 1 bunch fresh broccoli, 8 slices roasted turkey, 8 slices cooked ham, 4 slices Swiss type cheese.

Cut broccoli in small pieces and cook in boiling water for five to eight minutes. Drain.

Place a piece of cheese on each ham slice. Put a couple of broccoli spears on top of cheese, roll up and secure with wooden picks.

COOKING

With Dorothy Wrotnowski

Put turkey slices in bottom of casserole and top with ham roll. Cover casserole and cook in a 350 oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Serve on toast rounds and pour Hollandaise sauce over top.

Hollandaise Sauce
1/2 cup butter, 1/2 cup cream,

2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, salt to taste, dash of cayenne pepper.

Melt butter in top of double boiler. Add cream and beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and salt. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from stove and beat until light. Add cayenne.

Turkey Crepes

3 eggs, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon cream, 1 tablespoon water, pinch of salt. Mix ingredients together until the consistency of thick cream. Heat a small frying pan (eight-inch) and melt enough butter to cover surface and sides of pan. Put two or three tablespoons of batter in pan—enough to cover thinly. Brown lightly and turn.

Filling
2 teaspoons butter, 1 1/2 cups cubed cooked turkey, 4 teaspoons finely chopped onion, 1 cup grated cheddar type cheese, 2 cans mushroom soup, 1/2 cup medium dry white wine, sliced black olives, pimiento pieces. Sauté Onions in butter until transparent but not brown. Add 1-3 cup mushroom soup with 1 tablespoon wine and stir until blended. Add turkey and pimiento. Season to taste.

Put turkey mixture along one side of crepe and roll up. Place rolls open edge down in baking pan and sprinkle with cheese. Bake in 350 oven 20 minutes or until cheese is melted and bubbly.

While crepes are baking heat rest of soup with sliced olives and remaining wine and serve over crepes.

Turkey Turnovers
Sauté 3 tablespoons minced onion and 1/2 cup finely chopped celery in butter until soft. Add about 1 1/2 cups cubed turkey and add salt to taste. Moisten with thin gravy, or Chili sauce.

Roll pastry out thinly into four-inch squares. Place a couple of spoonfuls of turkey mixture on one side of pastry and fold over into triangle. Moisten edges and press firmly together. Bake in 400 oven for 10 to 15 minutes. Serve with heated gravy or mushroom sauce.

Mushroom Sauce
1-3 cup butter, 1 1/2 cups milk, 2 cups sliced mushrooms, 1/2 cup cream, 3 tablespoons flour, salt to taste.

Sauté mushrooms over low heat about five minutes. Sprinkle with flour. Add milk, cream and salt. Put in double boiler and cook over boiling water until thick, stirring to keep smooth.

Turkey Salad
2 cups cooked turkey, cubed, 1/2 cup chopped toasted almonds, 2 cups shredded lettuce, 1/2 cup finely chopped celery, salad dressing or mayonnaise. Toss ingredients together with dressing and adjust seasoning.

Turkey Casserole
1 can cheese soup, 1/2 cup milk, 1 small can chow mein noodles, 1 cup cooked rice, 3 cups cubed turkey, 1 can chop suey vegetables, 1 1/2 teaspoons soy sauce, salt and pepper.

Blend soup, milk, soy sauce, salt and pepper. Combine vegetables with rice and turkey. Place alternate layers of turkey mixture and sauce in casserole. Bake at 350 for half hour. Then arrange noodles around edge of casserole and bake five minutes longer.

A Lovelier You

Waistline Holds the Key To Lithe Look of Youth

By MARY SUE MILLER

A girl writes: It seems to me that with belts wrapping up the waistline, a slim middle is one of the best assets a girl can have. Well, I'm a have not and am doing reducing exercises. What I would like to know is the measurement of an ideal waistline.

The answer: A quick bit of arithmetic will answer the question for you. Here's how to figure:

Measure your wrist around the boniest area and jot down the result. Then judge your bone size as big to medium to small.

If your bones are small multiply your wrist measurement by four. Multiply by four and a half, if wrist bones are medium or large. The answer cues your ideal waist measurement.

Example A: Wrist measurement six inches (small bones) times four equals a 24-inch waist. Example B: Wrist measure of 6 inches (medium to large bones) times 4 1/2 equals a 27 inch waist. If medium boned, subtract one inch for ideal waist of 26 inches.

Once you ascertain your ideal waist measurement, you know just how much work you have to do in the exercise department. Do add a diet to exercise if you are generally overweight. The double dose pays double dividends.

A trim measurement gives the silhouette the balanced, lithe look of youth. Actually the waist is the figure's centre of gravity. When it's off centre, the whole figure is thrown off.

THE FABRIC DOCTOR HAS THE ANSWERS

QUESTION:
Why Do Drycleaning Prices Vary?—Mrs. J. T.

Dear Mrs. J. T.: Each drycleaner must decide the standard of quality that he is going to provide for his customers and then sets his price accordingly. As a general rule low prices are the result of high production, less attention to detail with a resultant lower standard of quality. We provide our customers with top quality at a fair price and we also have the experience and technical knowledge to give you outstanding service.

25 stains that are waiting to defeat you.

These are the Aggravators. The tough stains that make you want to cry. 'Javex'® Bleach gets rid of 15 of them without soaking! The nastiest soak out in minutes. Read why no woman can risk a wash without 'Javex' Bleach.

'Javex' safely removes more different kinds of stains than any other stain remover you can buy. It doesn't just cover stains, it actually removes them by taking apart their complex chemical structures. But 'Javex' is so safe it can't damage fabrics used as directed.

Maybe it will surprise you, but $\frac{3}{4}$ cup of 'Javex' mixed in your regular wash will get rid of 15 of the Aggravators without one minute of pre-soaking!

1 Coffee. Even with cream and sugar. Part greasy, part non-greasy. 'Javex' in your wash cleans it out. No soak!

2-4 Grass, Flower, Foliage Stains. Launder with 'Javex'. If they're on the knees of durable-press slacks, test the fabric for safety in 'Javex'. Some of the less expensive kind will yellow in bleach. See the test below.

5 Tea. Tough, yet it disappears in wash water with 'Javex'.

6 Butter. A greasy breeding ground for the bacteria that digest cotton. 'Javex' gets out the stain and kills the bacteria.

7 Catsup. Your regular 'Javex' wash will get it out when it's fresh. If it's dry—soak it.

8 Lipstick. One of the toughest? Wrong. Lipstick stains come right out in your 'Javex' wash.

9 Cosmetics. Most of the time, they'll come out in the wash. If any stains remain, soak a few minutes in 1 oz. of 'Javex' and a quart of warm water.

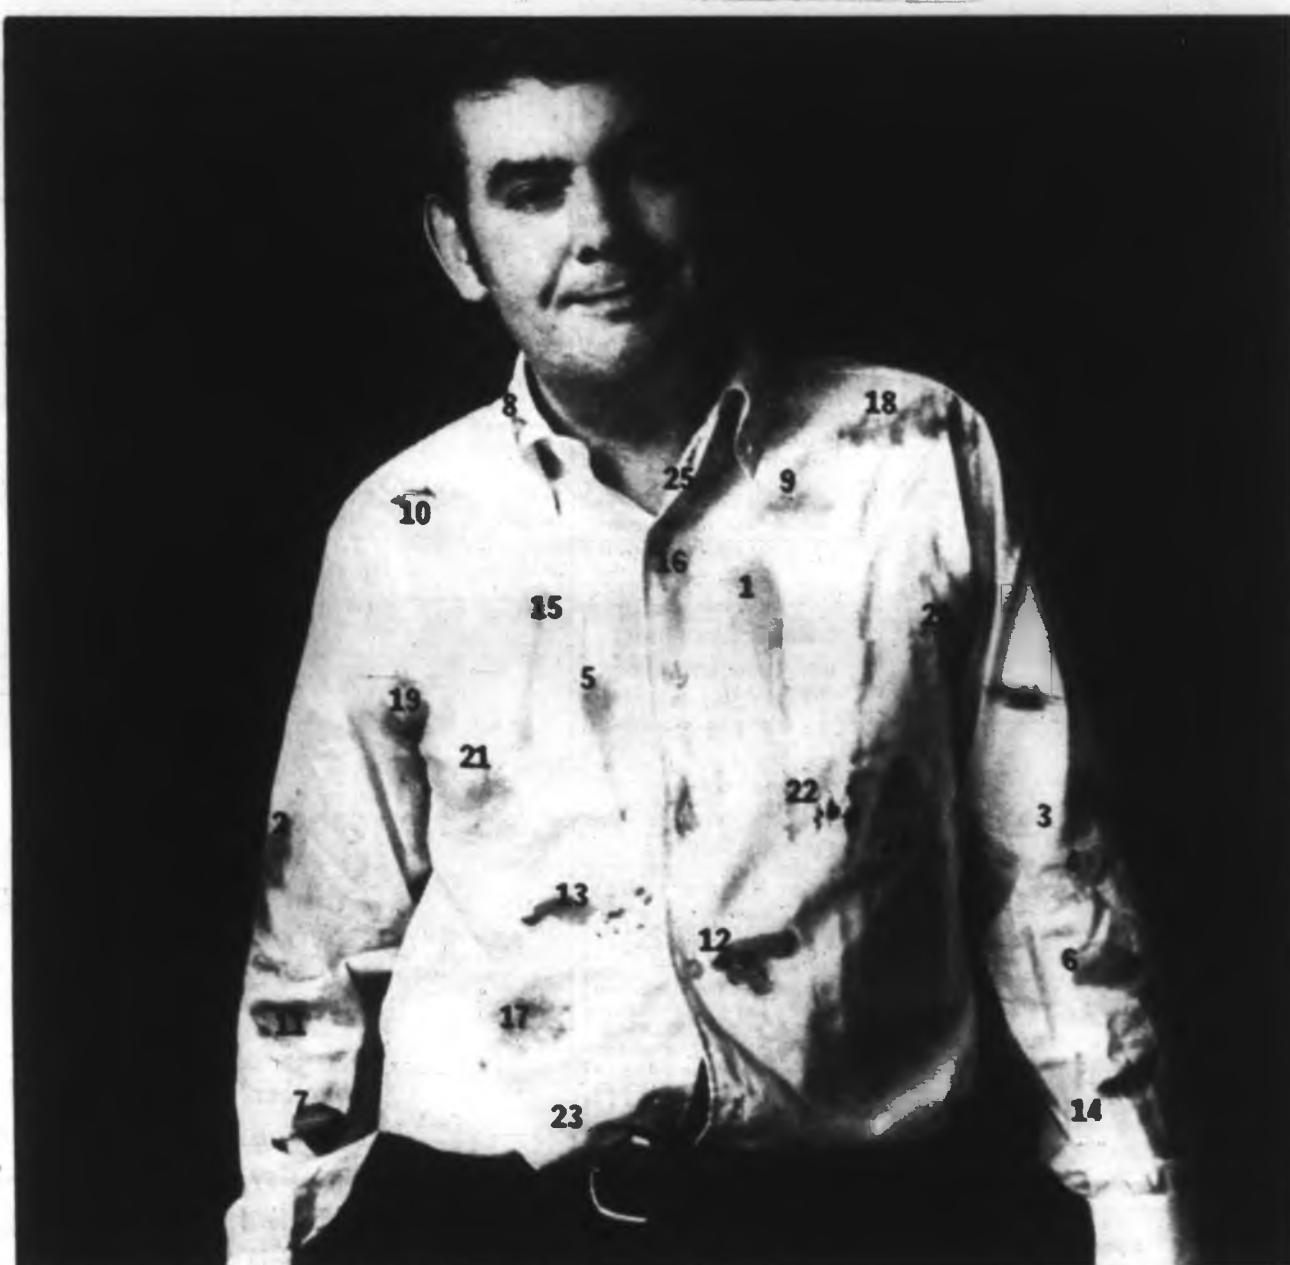

10 Mascara. This is worse than most cosmetics. Launder in 'Javex' before you soak it as above.

11 Mayonnaise. Launder with 'Javex' and get rid of the stain and the bacteria in it. (20,000 bacteria may live in 1 square inch of freshly laundered fabric! Many actually digest cotton!)

12 Mustard. Before it dries, remove it with 'Javex' in your regular laundry. Set, it'll take soaking.

13 Salad Dressing. It's no problem for 'Javex' in your wash.

14 Shoe Polish. 'Javex' in your laundry. Safe for cotton, synthetics and some permanent-press, but not wool socks.

15 Soft Drinks. On white or colour-fast clothes—launder them in 'Javex'.

So much for the Aggravators that need no soaking. What about the real toughies? Make this solution: 1 oz. of 'Javex' Bleach and 1 qt. of warm water and soak the following stains for 5 to 15 minutes.

16 Alcoholic Drinks. Depends on what. A brief soak is usually enough.

17 Mildew. It's actually caused by living organisms. 'Javex' wipes out the stain and the organisms.

18 Dyes. On white or colour-fast fabrics, soak out in 'Javex'. Repeat if needed. But you won't have to stretch washday into two days with a tiresome overnight soak.

19 Antiperspirants. They leave awful stains. Soak them. Bonus: 'Javex' kills odour-causing bacteria.

20 Deodorant. Chemically different. 'Javex' gets these out too.

21 Blueing. Why use it? 'Javex' removes the dull gray that deadens whites.

Blueing covers it up. If you have a blueing stain, use the 'Javex' soak.

22 Liquid Ink. The 'Javex' soak gets rid of the non-washable kind, even off fingers. Rinse hands after.

23 Perspiration. 'Javex' not only gets out the stain, it gets out the smell.

24 Scorch. Heavy scorch cannot be taken out. Most light scorch will come out in 'Javex'. Try several times.

25 Blood. When fresh, cold water will flush it out. Follow up with the 'Javex' soak to clean out any residue.

If you're not sure about the colour-fastness or the safety of fabric: mix 1 tsp. of 'Javex' Bleach in 1 cup of warm water. Apply some to an unseen area. If it does not discolour or turn yellow in about 5 minutes the colours and the fabric are safe in 'Javex' Bleach.

Safe for stain removal.
Safe for laundering every time. So start getting everything you can out of 'Javex'.

Without 'Javex' in every wash clothes aren't clean.

Prairie Store Chain Probed on Pricing

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal unfair pricing whenever they arise. But the annual report of D.H. Henry, director of investigation and research under the Combines Investigation Act, said "no convincing evidence."

He said in a statement that the federal government will consent to a recent provincial time to check other reports of royal commission inquiry.

The royal commission was set up by the three Prairie provinces and headed by Judge Mary Batten of Saskatchewan. She reported in March that the largest sellers—Canada Safeway and the Weston Stores, Loblaw's, O.K. Economy, Westfair and so on—had sufficient power to push prices above competitive levels.

She also said excessive store-building, costly advertising, and luxurious and expensive supermarkets have raised the cost of food distribution on the Prairies.

NOT JUDGMENT

But Henry said Judge Batten's report gave no convincing evidence to support the allegations. He said his study was not a judgment of the actual performance of the grocery trade on the Prairies, but only a review of the evidence in the Batten report.

Tabling Henry's report in the Commons, Basford said one inquiry has been under way for several months "involving alleged predatory practices by a major grocery chain in a leading Prairie city."

In line with long-standing policy while such an investigation is in progress, Basford did not disclose the name of the firm or its location.

MERGER REGISTER

The anti-combines annual report said it now has an up-to-date register to keep track of all mergers in Canadian industry. This started with an inquiry in 1961 into 1,827 mergers.

Basford said this information will be valuable to the government in developing new legislation governing mergers, but the information was given the government by the companies involved on a strictly private basis.

Roadside Suspension

Saskatchewan Following B.C.

REGINA (UPI) — Saskatchewan Tuesday followed British Columbia in establishing a 24-hour licence suspension law for suspected drunken drivers.

Provincial Attorney-General D. V. Heald said the new law was "preventive rather than punitive" and did not necessarily involve prosecuting the suspect.

Under the legislation, police are empowered to suspend a licence for 24 hours if they suspect a driver has consumed sufficient alcohol to bring his blood alcohol content to .08 per cent. A driver contesting the temporary suspension can demand a breathalyzer test and if this indicates less than .08 per cent, he gets his licence back. Conviction on an impaired driving charge brings an automatic six-month suspension for the first offence and one year for the second.

Extra Chromosome Extenuating Factor

PARIS (AP) — A man was convicted of murder Monday but given only a seven-year sentence because of extenuating circumstances: he has one chromosome too many.

The trial of Daniel Hugon, 32, involved exhaustive testimony by researchers and professors on whether an extra Y chromosome makes men "born killers." The experts said it did not although its presence brought on "troubles of comportment and humor."

The question was left to the jurors, who decided that a man thus unbalanced from birth should not be severely punished for his transgressions.

In a similar case, a 21-year-old laborer was acquitted of a murder charge in Melbourne, Australia, last week on grounds of insanity. A psychiatrist said tests showed he had an extra Y chromosome.

Ceremony to Start B.C. Entry

Japan and Hong Kong will be the major stopping places for Trade and Industry Minister Waldo Skilling, who leaves Vancouver today on a two-week visit to the Orient.

The main purpose of his trip, Mr. Skilling said, is to take part in ground-breaking ceremonies for the B.C. Pavilion on the grounds of Expo 70 at Osaka, Japan. He will also visit Tokyo and Kyoto.

The $730,000 contract for the construction of the pavilion has been awarded to one of Japan's largest building firms, Shimizu Construction Ltd. The job is being supervised by Dominion Construction Co., Vancouver.

On Oct. 28, Mr. Skilling files part of a consortium which was awarded the $1,750,000 contract to Hong Kong to return a visit made to B.C. by a group of Hong Kong businessmen.

Former Alcoholics

'First Class' Citizens Tell Stories

About 250 people wept and cheered Sunday as five Island residents and a Californian told publicly the former miseries of their lives and the ugliness of alcoholism.

All six pleaded that Victorians with alcoholic problems go to their local Alcoholics Anonymous for assistance in solving the problem.

The pleas, made at a public meeting in the Empress Hotel during the 12th annual AA convention over the weekend, moved Mayor Hugh Stephen, of Victoria.

THEY'RE BEAUTIFUL!
 "I've never been to a public gathering like this before, where people who have caused so much misery have told about it," the mayor said. "These people are now really first-class citizens. They're beautiful. My real worry is: What if we had no AA?"

"There is no other organization these people, as derelicts, could have turned to for treatment. AA is doing a magnificent job."

The audience, which included small children, heard a pretty young Nanaimo woman, her voice often faltering, tell that at one time her "whole world was booze."

"I started drinking when I was 12. I thought I was a big wheel," she said. "I couldn't even go to a picture show without taking a Mickey in my purse."

"I started having blackouts. I was constantly wiring home for money. I always lied to myself. And I thrived on sympathy."

"On one big drunk, I woke up in bed in a hotel room, looked at this fellow in bed with me, and learned I had married him," she said.

WRONG NAME
 "I called him Merv all that day and learned later that his real name was Merv. I couldn't recall having seen either him or his black leather jacket before that day."

A Cowichan Indian told of his wife who almost took her own life because of the way he treated her.

"She complained because I hadn't called her by her right name in years," he said. "It's true, too. I always used a cuss word when I spoke to her. And my children would hide by the door when I was in the house, afraid to come in."

"That beautiful woman is here with me today. AA has given me back my family. It took almost losing them to realize what a crazy Indian I was."

Garden Notes

Space Claimants

By M. V. CHESNUT

Our family is quite mad about tulips and daffodils, both for cutting and for garden decoration, and at this time of the year there is a tendency to crowd the garden looking for some little corner where we might be able to squeeze in a few more of these delightful harbingers of spring.

However, it is well to keep in mind the fact that there are other bulbs with some claim to garden space; one lovely subject which should be planted much more freely in the suburban anemone.

Several of the species are ideal for growing in light or partial shade, where they seed themselves and become naturalized almost as well as our native Camassia Lily and our Dog's Tooth violet. Anemones are equally at home in the rock garden too, as their loose and informal character seems to blend better with the rugged rocks than a lot of the more commonly planted miniature bulbs.

The first of the family to bloom, hard on the heels of the snowdrops and winter aconites, is Anemone blanda. In established colonies, this low-growing plant carpets the ground with a misty blue, but when the flowers are examined individually, quite a range of colors will be found, all the way from deep purple to pure white. One named variety, Scythica, has rich blue petals with a white reverse.

Anemone appennina is a brighter blue and altogether a much more showy flower, although the plant is less compact and more straggling in habit. This one, too, is easy to naturalize, and if you let it go its own way, the colony will throw out flying colonies which will advance, year by year, through and around your shrubs. Anemone's soft beauty, though, is so appealing you'll need a hard heart to deny the clump its encroachment.

There is no scarlet flower anywhere in the garden with a more vivid shade than Anemone fulgens, flowering in May. To be seen at its best, this one should have lots of sun and a site approximating the thin, stony, sun-baked soil of its native Greece and Asia Minor.

Almost everyone knows and loves the common Anemone coronaria — the one with poppy-like flowers — which can be induced to bloom almost every month of the year. The best garden forms are St. Bridget, with semi-double flowers, and De Caen, bearing immense single blooms. Both of these groups come in a wide range of colors, from pink and white to scarlet and purple.

All these kinds are grown from chunky little tubers which can be planted this fall, preferably before the end of October, setting them six to eight inches apart and three inches deep. Imported bulbs are often very dry, and I think there is some advantage in soaking them overnight before planting.

This is also the season for setting out — in limed soil — the Pulsatilla, a race very closely related to the anemones and which includes the beloved Prairie crocus. This wildflower, while thriving right out on the bald-headed prairies of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, seems rather difficult to get established firmly in our climate; I imagine it doesn't care much for our wet winters.

I am often asked the true name of the Prairie crocus, official floral emblem of Manitoba; it is Pulsatilla ludoviciana. It has a cousin, Pulsatilla vulgaris, which takes more kindly to our mild climate and is a grander flower altogether, with silky purple petals embracing a golden centre.

Like the crocuses, the flowers come before the leaves, showing first on short stems in March. As the furry buds open, the stems grow longer, but it is not until after the flowers wither that the delicate fernlike foliage pushes up.

ART BUCHWALD Finds First Adviser to Vietnam

How U.S. Got Involved

WASHINGTON — In all the discussions on what went wrong in Vietnam, no one has asked the crucial question: "Who was the first American adviser to South Vietnam, and what kind of advice did he give to get Washington in so much trouble?"

Through careful research and extraordinary luck, I managed to locate him the other day. His name is Keenan Rutledge and he now works for an automobile company recalling faulty steering wheels.

At first Keenan was reluctant to discuss the role he played in Vietnam, but after my plying him with drinks he opened up.

"I was a private in the army," Keenan said, "stationed at Fort Bragg back in 1954. I was on KP one day and the sergeant came in and said, 'Rutledge, how would you like to get off KP?'"

"I asked what I had to do and he said, 'There's some place called Vietnam and they need an adviser for their army. The Captain said to take someone from the KP list."

"But Sarge, what should I advise them?"

"How do I know? I don't even know where Vietnam is."

Keenan looked into his glass. "I figured anything was better than KP, so I packed my duffel bag and waited for available transport."

"In those days everything was based on priority. It took three months before anyone would fly me to Vietnam."

"Well, I got there and showed up at the palace in Saigon. Everyone was waiting for me from the premier on down and the first thing they asked me was, 'What's your advice?'"

"I said, 'I don't like the look of things,' and this impressed the hell out of them. I then said, 'The first thing you ought to do is defend yourselves.'"

"They liked that, but I could tell they were still disturbed and finally one of the cabinet officers said, 'We respect your advice, but what bothers us is why the United States would send us a private to advise our military problems.'"

"I thought fast and said, 'This is just a disguise to throw off the communist agents. I'm really a corporal.'"

"That satisfied them and they said they would do anything I told them."

"Well, there I was in Vietnam all by myself, and they were counting on me to save them. I wrote a letter to the Pentagon telling them about the advice I had given the South Vietnamese so far and they congratulated me and asked me if there was anything I wanted."

"I had just seen the movie Wake Island on television, so as a gag I radioed back 'Send me more Japs.'"

"This must have gotten them very confused in Washington, because the next thing I knew they sent out an Inspector General to find out what was going on. I told him that things were going very well and I expected to be home by Christmas."

"The Inspector General reported this back to the Secretary of Defense who went on television and announced to the American public, 'Our boys in Vietnam will be home by Christmas.'"

"In the meantime the South Vietnamese were leaning on me pretty heavily for advice, and since I couldn't be everywhere at the same time, I asked the Pentagon to send out another adviser."

"Since I was out there first, I was the senior adviser and he was the junior adviser. I was promoted to sergeant."

"Now the United States was committed, because it had two men in Vietnam. When Bob Hope heard about it he came out and did a show for the two of us."

"Unfortunately, the South Vietnamese kept asking for more and more advice, so we had to keep asking for more and more advisers. One thing led to another and pretty soon I was commanding 48,000 advisers and had the rank of major general. I guess if I had stayed I would have had Westmoreland's job."

"What made you leave?"

"The South Vietnamese got sore at me. I told them if they ever hoped to win the war they'd have to win the hearts and minds of the people, and they said angrily, 'When we want your advice we'll ask for it.'"

SHEILAH GRAHAM's World Katie Deserves Another Oscar

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Until I saw Katharine Hepburn in The Lion in Winter, I believed Barbara Blomberg was a sure bet to win the Oscar for her performance in Funny Girl. I think the time has come to split the Oscar down the middle, one half for the best performance in a film musical, the other for the best dramatic acting, and for the latter Katie would win, hands down.

The Lion in Winter will take home most of the Oscars for this year—unless something is coming up that I haven't seen. Miss Hepburn's performance is the distillation of everything she has learned about her craft in her long career.

Because she won the statuette last year for Guess Who's Coming to Dinner is no valid reason why she shouldn't win it for her superb portrayal of Eleanor of Aquitaine.

There are definite nominations for the young director, Anthony Harvey, the writer, James Goldman, the producer, Martin Poll, a fine supporting role by young newcomer John Castle as Philip, King of France, Peter O'Toole, who almost won the Oscar for Lawrence of Arabia, should take it home this year for his rampaging King Henry.

Peter Sellers is taking a leaf from Cary Grant's marital notebook and leaving the attorney for Britt Ekland up to the judge. Peter is quite willing to be divorced, but he is not willing to pay what Britt feels she ought to get.

Jan Sterling will be the next Mrs. Sam Wanamaker if the actor-director, currently helming the Yul Brynner starer, File of the Golden Goose, convinces his wife from whom he is separated that a divorce would be a good idea.

Some of the stuff in Secret Ceremony, which stars Elizabeth Taylor, Mia Farrow and Robert Mitchum, makes Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf look like a bedtime story for the infant set. Elizabeth and Mitchum scream more four-letter words than have ever been heard before on screen, or stage. Elizabeth prepares the audience for what is to come by belching loudly and early in the picture. Mia turns Delilah and chops off Robert's head. As for old Bob, he has a fine time of it and you have to laugh when he refers to himself in the film as "a wretched lecher." He is, too—in the film.

A Girl's Best Friend is the cameraman—as Barbara Streisand soon realized in Funny Girl. Harry Stradling made her radiantly beautiful. Katharine Ross, who is really beautiful, finds Conrad Hall really entrancing—he's the cameraman on her present picture with Paul Newman and Robert Redford, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid.

What director of an about-to-be-released film took LSD to know how to direct his leading man who takes several trips, according to the script?

While the book The Boston Strangler makes it clear that Dennis is the Boston strangler, the 20th Century-Fox film starring Tony Curtis and Henry Fonda is not that sure. Will we ever really know?

When I was last talking to Peter O'Toole, in Paris, he was excited about buying a racehorse called My Son. He is now thinking of selling the horse which cost him $50,000 and has been running out of the money ever since.

There are rumors that Julie Andrews and Blake Edwards will not wait until Christmas to tie the knot. It could happen as soon as her divorce from Tony Walton is final, unless it is earlier via a Mexican decree.

Courtroom Parade

Youth's History 'Heartbreaking'

One of three teenagers charged with offences stemming from a series of thefts last month, heard Magistrate William Ostler call his appearance Tuesday the "last of three heartbreaking cases."

The magistrate observed, "What this boy is looking for is more attention," and defence counsel agreed.

"Committing crime is one of the surest ways of getting attention," he added.

SINCE BIRTH

Court heard the boy had been "rejected since birth," a ward of the Children's Aid Society since he was eight, and had escaped from Braman Lake eight times.

Magistrate Ostler asked counsel, "What can I do with him?"

"I know it doesn't appear as if these boys, but my first concern is what can be done for them," Magistrate Ostler said before passing sentence.

LIFF, COUSE

"Only by reversing the course of his life can something be done for the boy," he said.

When reminded by defence counsel that the boy was only 15 when the offences occurred, Magistrate Ostler said, "I remember it. And that's why it's so profoundly disturbing."

The boy was sentenced to 10 to 18 months on each of two charges in Oakalla's Young Offenders' Unit. Both terms are to be served concurrently.

Ian MacDonald, 26, of Vancouver, pleaded guilty Tuesday to obtaining food and lodging by fraud.

Court heard MacDonald testified he had returned to Vancouver without paying his Victoria bill because he was "tight-end."

He said it was the first time he had ever been unable to pay a debt, and said he was "guilty of being stupid" in running away without discussing his plight with the landlady.

SOCIAL WORKER

Court was told MacDonald had worked 2½ years as a social worker, with runaway children.

"You are a runaway kid yourself," Magistrate Ostler told him.

Prosecutor Cory Shive told court the Victoria bill had been paid later by the accused. MacDonald was fined $50.

Told by Magistrate Ostler, "You are stubborn about liquor offences," Lorne Barnswell, 19, of 915 Dunsmuir, was fined $40 on a charge of being a minor in possession of liquor.

It was Barnswell's second possession conviction. He told court that he hadn't owned the liquor in the first conviction but "took the blame for a buddy," because that person had already been convicted twice before on the same charge.

Douglas Cartwright, 1241 W. Burrside, was fined $35 after he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance Saturday.

Court was told Cartwright was drunk and arguing with the hat check girl in the Red Lion dining room.

Nirmal S. Bains, 32, of 1025 Tillamook, pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges of impaired driving and failure to remain at the scene of an accident.

An interpreter speaking Punjabi translated proceedings for the accused.

Bains was fined $400 and his licence was suspended on the impaired charge, and was fined $100 on the hit-and-run charge.

Gerald O. Hjebn, 33, of Campbell River, pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges of impaired driving and using the wrong licence plates on his vehicle.

He was fined $350 and his licence was suspended on the impaired charge, and he was fined $25 on the improper plate charge.

Also fined for impaired driving and their driving licences:

suspended: Cornelius H. Roadhal, 461 Dureddin, $350, and John S. Clements, 62, of 440 Simcoe, $300.

Fined for consuming liquor in a public place: Kenneth O. G. Cortini, of 1888 Derby, $50, and Melvin Caldwell, of 1744 Duches, $50. They pleaded guilty to the charges which arose in upland communities.

Ralph S. Pontius, of 1425 Elford, was fined $40 after pleading guilty here to careless driving Sept. 22 at Nanaimo.

Magistrate Ostler said the offence was not covered by the new demerit system because it occurred in an area not covered by the new statutes.

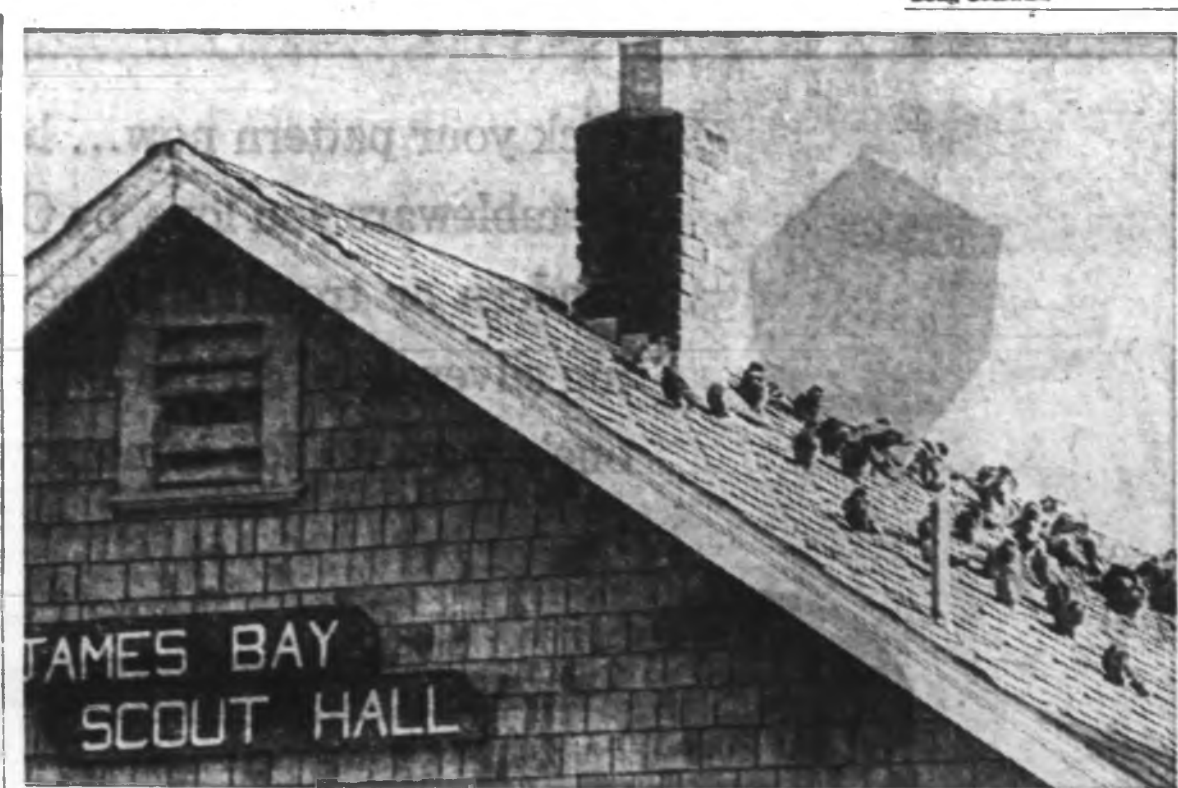

Thomas McGregor, 20, of 1410 Elford, pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol and was fined $35.

Eugene C. Smeard, 74, of Room 17, New England Hotel, was sentenced to six months in jail after being convicted of stealing a radio Friday from The Bay.

'We Expect Mistakes'—Strachan

Embarrassment Gained By Young Democrats

Powering the young wing of the New Democratic Party in B.C., according to Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, was one of his "new ideas" that the younger would prove embarrassing—and it has.

The NDP provincial leader was asked to comment Tuesday on the weekend action by the Young New Democrats at their convention in Vancouver in seeking a five-way leadership contest within the party.

"I've always had new ideas," Mr. Strachan said, "but possibly one of the poorer ones was the idea that we should have the Young New Democrats."

'I'M SMILING'

Of course, he added, "I'm smiling when I say that. I fought the executive of the party to have a YND organization years ago. Most of them were not as busy about it, but I supported it 100 per cent."

"I said at the time there are

times when they will embarrass us and do things we don't like, but it is important to give youth a voice."

Asked whether he still felt that way, Mr. Strachan replied: "We expect our children to make mistakes."

The YND resolution approved by the convention called on four NDP members of the legislature—Dave Barrett, Alex MacDonald, Bob Williams, and Tom Berger—to seek the party leadership. It claimed the NDP in this province is in grave danger of stagnating under Mr. Strachan's leadership.

Mr. MacDonald, asked later to comment on the YND action, said flatly the party leadership was not vacant and there was no race for Mr. Strachan's job.

"How can anybody run in a race that isn't on?" asked Mr. Barrett.

NOT RUNNING

Mr. Williams said he had not considered running for the provincial leadership "at the moment."

He added: "Mr. Strachan has provided good leadership, especially in the House, and has proved himself in that arena to be more effective than the remainder of the group."

The YND resolution also urged an amendment to the party constitution, which allows the party caucus to recommend a leader to the annual convention where the leadership is always open. Delegates also indicated they felt the four MLAs named were campaigning behind the scenes, although only one, Mr. Berger, had openly challenged Mr. Strachan.

In 1967, when Mr. Berger failed to defeat the present leader, the caucus backed Mr. Strachan. Mr. Berger, who was reported to be in Port Hardy on business Tuesday, was not immediately available for comment on the YND action.

Bennett:

Centralists Sole Foes Of Unity

Canada has nothing to fear but "the centralists" who are the only threat to national unity, Premier Bennett said Tuesday.

The premier was asked to comment on the formation over the weekend of the new Quebec independence party, Le Parti Quebecois, headed by Rene Levesque, which is dedicated to attaining sovereignty for Quebec.

"I think Canada will be one great united country," Mr. Bennett said, as he entered a cabinet meeting. "The only people we have to fear are the centralists." He didn't identify the centralists.

FURTHER WORD

The premier indicated he would have a further statement of B.C.'s stand on national unity for presentation to the federal-provincial conference on the constitution to be held in Ottawa Dec. 16 to 18.

But he added: "I am all for Canadian unity. You notice how we got the final payment today from Quebec on our loan to them, right on time. This shows that the Social Credit government of British Columbia practices unity."

The premier's office also issued a prepared statement with regard to receipt of the final payment on the $100,000,000 loan made by B.C. to Quebec in 1964.

CONGRATULATIONS

He said: "Mr. Bennett congratulated the government and province of Quebec on the present manner in which they met the interest and principal payments."

The premier added that the making of this loan by the Social Credit government of the province of British Columbia to La Belle Province of Quebec is a real example of Canadian unity compared to the critics of the Social Credit government who only talk about Canadian unity and do nothing really effective regarding it.

Quebec made the first payment of $40,000,000 in December, 1965, followed by a $40,000,000 payment last December. The interest rate on the loan was 5.05 per cent, with interest paid semi-annually.

Ship off India Sinks in Storm

BOMBAY, India (UPI)—The 1,500-ton freighter Maha sank in stormy seas off the southern tip of India but all 19 crew members were saved by rescue boats. The Maha, a Kinnaird-registered vessel, was enroute from Hong Kong to Basra, Iraq, with a cargo of timber.

Californians Fleeing Before God's Hand

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (AP) — Predicting an earthquake will destroy Southern California, a minister and most of his congregation struck out Saturday for Tennessee.

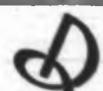

Elder Robert J. Theobald, 28, his wife, Nancy, and two children headed a seven-car motorcade carrying nine families to new homes in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

"We are not trembling and running, as it were, with our hearts full of fear," said the young pastor of the Friendly Bible Apostolic church.

"If this were the case, many of us would have left long ago."

He blames the earthquake threat on the "general wickedness of people in Southern California with its hippies, homosexuals and topless nightclubs."

Airline Retires First Plane

OTTAWA (CP) — A host of government and Air Canada officials bade a fond farewell Tuesday to the airline's first plane, the 31-year-old CF-TEA.

The occasion was a ceremony at which airline officials turned over the two-engine Lockheed 10A to the Museum of Science and Technology.

H. W. Seagrin, acting president of the airline, told a gathering of about 100 on the tarmac at Ottawa International Airport they were witnessing the final performance of the first new plane delivered to the then Trans-Canada Air Lines in 1937.

The aircraft was the first in which many of the original TCA pilots took their training. It cost about $75,000 and was used on the airline's first trans-continental flight from Vancouver to Montreal in April, 1939.

CF-TEA began as an airliner on the scheduled Vancouver-to-Seattle service. It carried 10 paying passengers who were nestled in short single files with a narrow aisle between them.

The aircraft saw service with the RCAF and then was owned by several parties. It made an around-the-world flight last year to commemorate the trip of aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart in 1937 in a sister ship.

Air Canada began searching for the aircraft in 1967, found it at Willow Run, Mich., and repurchased it for $25,000. After 500 man hours it was deemed ready for its last flight to the museum here. It made the journey from Montreal in about an hour.

Negroes Urged To Arm

MONTREAL (CP)—Black Power leader Stokely Carmichael Monday urged North American Negroes to arm themselves and join "other oppressed peoples" in the war against racism, capitalism and imperialism.

Addressing about 1,000 delegates and observers attending the Black Writers' Congress at McGill University, Mr. Carmichael said true revolution won't come about "until you pick up that gun and are prepared to kill for your people."

Mr. Carmichael's 45-minute speech topped off a four-day conference marked with anti-white resentment coming both from speakers and delegates.

WHITES BARRED

In an earlier session Sunday, about 300 delegates stormed out of the congress in protest of white attendance. Cries of "kick all the white people out" were heard Sunday as the 300 Negroes locked themselves in a room and held all-black meetings.

Speaking without a text, Mr. Carmichael said wherever he is found the black man is at the bottom of the ladder.

He warned Negroes to learn the difference between being colonized and being exploited.

LIBERATION WARS

He urged Negroes to become familiar with "wars of liberation" being waged in other countries by the downtrodden. "Learn this because Africa will play a key role in the Third World War which is just around the corner. Learn this and get guns. Get all the guns you can get."

Guns, like hydrogen bombs, were equalizers.

"Every country has to have them because equality is military as well as political and economic. You can't have one without the other."

"If whites can get guns, blacks can get guns," he told the cheering audience.

In 'Winter Intermission'

Drapeau Drums for Better Fair

MONTREAL (CP)—Man and His World has closed its doors for the winter and cast its eyes toward broader horizons in the hope of making Montreal's permanent fair bigger and better next spring.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, who described the Monday closing merely as a "winter intermission," leaves Oct. 21 for a tour of a number of countries to encourage participation in the fair.

He will be accompanied by Guy Haot, 40-year-old director of Man and His World. Man and his World attracted a total of 12,516,490 visits in its five months since the opening last May 17.

The mayor and officials of Man and His World are hopeful the United States, as well as Britain and some of the other larger countries, will resume their participation in the fair as they had done at Expo 67.

While a total of 102,427 last-minute visitors stormed on to the fair site on Thanksgiving Day, men and machines went into action to show the crowd the city meant business when it between now and the spring open- announced plans to raise the curtain May 29 for a four-month various exhibition pavilions on run of the 1969 version of Man and His World.

A fair official estimated that the 1969 operation of the about $7,000,000 will be spent be- fair to break even.

Christmas Circling Now Possibility

Apollo Opens Moon-Trip Door

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 7, sailing into its second hundred hours in space, has opened the door for firm planning on putting three men around the moon on Christmas Day.

A reliable source said Tuesday the flight of Apollo 7 is going so well that high United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials are meeting this week to set a date for a flight around the moon. One source set launch day as Dec. 21, this year.

The source said contractors believe they will be able to establish procedures of training and hardware operation in time to make the flight in December. NASA, he said, is "busting a gut" to meet the December date.

"It will all depend upon whether the astronauts can get in enough training to do it," he said. "Everything else will be ready."

The only thing that might block a circum-lunar flight for Apollo 8, the next manned mission, would be problems later in the 11-day flight of Apollo 7.

But Apollo 7 was flying in "good shape," said flight controller Glynn Lunney, although the astronauts are fighting colds.

Forces Pay Increase Retroactive to Oct. 1

OTTAWA (CP)—Pay increases for the armed forces will be announced in three to four weeks and will be retroactive to Oct. 1, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said Tuesday.

Cadieux said the announcement will not involve service pensions. The aim is to adjust salaries "and do some catching up."

Reprisals Face Defiant Pupils

Voting Age in Britain Going Down to 18

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government has announced it will lower the voting age to 18 from 21, increasing the electorate by 3,000,000 voters to 40,000,000. A bill will be introduced in Parliament to enable teenage voters to register by February, 1970, well in time for the next election.

MONTREAL (CP) — Alarmed authorities threatened reprisals Tuesday as student protests snowballed across the province, with defiant teenagers taking over two more junior colleges and sympathizers boycotting classes in other institutions. (See also Page 24.)

Ten of Quebec's 23 new junior colleges now are entirely in student hands, with the latest two occupations in Chicoutimi and St. Johns. In addition, students have occupied three of the four buildings of an 11th institution, Old Montreal College.

Sympathizers took over the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Montreal and a high school in suburban Laval, while a one-day boycott of classes affected the University of Montreal and the province's seven normal schools.

Concern over the mushrooming expropriation movement which now involves about 28,000 students — brought college administrators together for an emergency meeting Monday night.

PLANS FOR ACTION
There was no collective announcement after the closed-door session, but administrators of two Montreal colleges — Maisonneuve and Old Montreal — announced plans for "concrete action."

Denis Latour, associate director of student services at Old Montreal, said action by his college might go as far as non-recognition of student achievement as far this year. "This would make it necessary for students to start the year's work over again."

FIRMER STAND
In the Saguenay River city of Chicoutimi, where students took over their college after voting 75 to 25 in favor of the move, college authorities took an even firmer stand.

Classes will resume Monday, Oct. 21, the college announced, and students who do not show up will lose their year's work. The youthful strikers have two main grievances against the provincial government — a lack of university facilities and a revised student aid policy which includes a cutback in scholarship funds and higher interest rates for student loans.

About the lack of facilities, students say 60 per cent of the first graduates of the new post-secondary colleges will find no place to live.

Rhodesian Front Party

British Bid Rejected

From UPI, CP

The ruling Rhodesian Front Party Tuesday night rejected outright the latest British proposals for settlement of the Rhodesian independence issue, giving a strong indication that the government of Premier Ian Smith also will turn them down.

Party chairman Ralph Nkomo said, "To have accepted the British proposals would have been total and abject surrender."

The British proposals were given to Smith last Sunday at the end of his 10-hour talks with British Prime Minister Wilson aboard the British assault ship HMS Fearless at Gibraltar.

Smith took the proposals back to Salisbury and laid them before a cabinet meeting Tuesday morning but no formal decision on them has been taken so far.

The proposals were published in a white paper in London Tuesday.

The Rhodesian Front Party executive is scheduled to meet today to consider the proposals, and well-informed political sources believe it will reject them.

In London, Wilson told Parliament Tuesday Britain would stand fast in its demand that rebel Rhodesia must develop majority rule by black Africans as a condition for official independence. Wilson said he was "keeping the door open" to further contacts on the subject although Smith left the Gibraltar talks with Wilson after no apparent progress.

Wilson said in reviewing those talks for parliamentary members: "Our position at the end of the talks, as throughout these past years, maintains the position repeatedly stated. . . . No retreat, no slamming the door by us."

He emphasized the British government would not compromise.

Garrison Terms Set By Czechs, Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Oldrich Cernik of Czechoslovakia agreed with Kremlin leaders Tuesday on a treaty dealing with basing of Soviet troops in his country. Czechoslovak sources said it was eight weeks to the day after the Warsaw pact invasion.

Official confirmation of an agreement was lacking. The Russians sought such a treaty to give final legality to the presence of their soldiers in Czechoslovakia.

NO INTERFERENCE

The Czechoslovak radio's Moscow correspondent, Antonin Kwikla, reported in a dispatch received in Prague that the treaty covering economic and legal conditions for stationing troops probably would be signed today. Prague television reported Cernik was assured by the Kremlin that Russian troops would not interfere in Czechoslovak internal affairs.

CERTAIN QUESTIONS

Czechoslovak sources reported Cernik, who returned to Moscow Monday for his fourth visit since the Soviet Union and four orthodox allies dispatched military forces to curb Czechoslovakia's liberalization program, would be heading back soon to Prague.

A communique, relayed abroad by the Czechoslovak

news agency CTK, said the two sides exchanged views on certain questions resulting from previous Moscow agreements, "especially as regards the conditions of a temporary stationing of Soviet troops on Czechoslovak territory—as envisaged by the communique on Soviet-Czechoslovak talks held in Moscow Oct. 3-4, 1968."

The Soviet news agency Tass, paraphrasing the same communique, said the topics included "the question of the terms for the temporary stay" of the troops.

Soviet participants included Premier Alexei Kosygin, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Defence Minister Marshal An-

The crew, navy Capt. Walter Schirra, Walter Cunningham and air Force Maj. Donn Eisele, took television viewers on a tour of the world's highest sickroom Tuesday. They ignored their colds long enough to perform some zero-gravity acrobatics. The spacemen, all needing a shave, cavorted in the weightlessness of outer space while the Apollo television camera carried their antics live to an audience on earth.

"Coming to you live from outer space, the one and only original Apollo orbiting round show starring the great acrobats from outer space, Wally Schirra and Walt Cunningham," Schirra announced as the space-to-ground TV signal started.

Eisele began the show with a sign used Monday in their first live telecast from space: "Hello from the Apollo room, high above everything."

First Cunningham and then Schirra floated into view from the spacecraft's lower equipment bay. They resembled swimmers under water, gliding smoothly and without effort past the camera.

Schirra then gave a televised tour of the complex spacecraft. The camera showed the crew members working before the consoles and displays which monitor the health of the spacecraft. At one point Eisele placed a pen in mid-air. The pen stayed there until he reached up to use it again.

The flyers obviously were concerned about their colds congesting the tubes leading to the ears. If these tubes are blocked, the crew could have intense pain on re-entry when the spacecraft pressure changes in less than half an hour from the five pounds a square inch used in space to the normal sea-level pressure of 14.7 pounds a square inch.

Observers in Biafra

Team Sees No Genocide

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — A team of foreign observers Tuesday reported no evidence supporting claims of genocide in Eastern Nigeria where rebel Biafrans are making a last stand against federal troops. The team had visited the southern sector of the fighting front where a federal noose is tightening around Umuahia, last major city in Biafran hands.

The international observer group issued a similar finding after a visit to the northern sector two weeks ago.

The team was headed by British army Gen. Henry Alexander and included officers from Sweden, Canada and Poland. They also reported that refugees behind the fighting lines were mostly in good condition. (See also Page 8.)

LARGE NUMBER

The report said more than half the refugees the team saw in federal camps outside the fighting zone were in a fair state of health and were being well looked after. However, some of the others, including a large number of children, were suffering from malnutrition.

The team also said there was a great shortage of doctors in the sector they visited. Aid on the ground from the army and the Red Cross did not exist on the scale it did in the northern sector and the Eastern Calabar region.

HOW FARING?

As the team published its report, there was no new indication how the federal troops were faring in their bid to end the civil war, which started May 30, 1967.

Most recent reports said federal troops were holding off a final assault on Umuahia in the hope that the rebel leaders would agree to negotiate an end to the strife.

However, the federal government has made it clear it will insist on an end to the Biafran secession as a condition for ending the war.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian newspapers want everyone but themselves to help put the post office on a pay-as-you-go basis, Postmaster-General Erle Kierans said in the Ottawa Citizen Tuesday.

He said newspapers gave almost unanimous editorial approval when he first announced that he wanted to balance the post office budget.

"Now the question is: 'Who, me?'" said Kierans.

TOUGH REPLY

The postmaster-general replied toughly to an opposition assault on his plans to increase the rates on second-class mail—which includes mailed newspapers—and to stop Saturday mail deliveries.

He said the present subsidy afforded publishers by the Canadian public in delivery of their publications is $37,000,000 annually.

He repeated his refusal to send rate-increasing legislation to a Commons committee for discussion before it is passed by Parliament.

ARGUMENTS ONLY

But he disclosed that 35 Liberal MPs had formed a caucus group to study five-day delivery and he would listen to their arguments, not to opposition "emotion."

He also promised to make public by Thursday a series of financial statements and supporting documents prepared by his department as a basis for the decisions to change postal rates and delivery schedules.

Campbell River Elderly

Counsellor Wants Queries

CAMPBELL RIVER — Mrs. Gwen Cave was appointed recently to act as counsellor for the aged in the Campbell River area.

One of her first duties was to attend a conference in Victoria sponsored by newly-formed division of the social welfare department. It was held for senior citizen counsellors. About 50 delegates attended.

It was the first of its kind to be held in B.C.

Mrs. Cave said that although no concrete agreements were reached, the meeting showed what would be needed in advice and assistance for B.C. elderly.

Mrs. Cave was suggested for the post by Campbell River Old Age Pensioners. Her job will be to liaise between senior citizens and the provincial government.

The elderly will be able to go to her with their questions. If Mrs. Cave cannot answer them, she said she will take the queries to the appropriate government department.

Mrs. Cave has returned from the conference full of enthusiasm and ideas for providing the service.

"But we will have to have some sort of directives issued," she said.

"And, are we to seek the old people out or will it be up to them to contact us with their problems?" A lot of publicity will be needed to acquaint the aging with the type of assistance we will have to offer, and we'll need some sort of office or headquarters to which they can refer."

Mrs. Cave felt that most of the discussion and proposals centred around urban areas where there is a greater concentration of people.

"But there are just as many old people in the rural areas and they are going to be harder to contact," she said.

Port Alberni

City Manager System Rapped by McKnight

PORT ALBERNI—Port Alberni's city manager system of government was strongly criticized at Tuesday's city council meeting by Ald. George McKnight.

He submitted a three-page document in which he claimed that there is a rising level of criticism and dissatisfaction among residents concerning progress by council. He also felt that there was dissatisfaction on council.

"In my opinion the time has come to discuss the problems frankly and openly in public session so that public confidence in the council can be restored and re-enforced," he said.

SHORTEST TIME
"The problems can be recognized and corrected and the work improved in the shortest possible time," he said.

Ald. McKnight claimed that under the present administration system, motions which were passed by council were not carried out in many cases.

"Problems referred to management are often not attended to with the dispatch, indeed in some cases not at all. Letters to council, dealt with by council are in some cases not replied to. Complaints from citizens, taken to management, are not attended to soon enough, and in some cases not at all. Letters and directives of council are not followed up to ensure they are adhered to.

"In other words, we are bogged down, and management is making little or no effort to overcome these problems. But management itself is not altogether to blame for this.

"The council's whole method of organization is such that it seriously limits the efforts of management as well as the council itself to overcome these problems."

'ATTACK ON SYSTEM'

Ald. McKnight said he submitted the document not as an attack on any one person, but as an attack on "an improper and unworkable system."

Ald. George Dunbar seconded a motion that the document be received and referred to a committee as a whole for discussion.

"I would say that I agree entirely with all Ald. McKnight's comments," he said.

NO CALL

Ald. Jim Macle said he had never received any phone calls or complaints. He suggested that Ald. McKnight might have been soliciting the calls.

He commended the city hall staff for their work. Ald. Macle said the document was "completely unworkable" in open council and is the most ridiculous document he has ever seen.

Mayor Fred Bishop said he almost totally disagreed with the report. But he realized there was some dissatisfaction in the time it takes council to accomplish certain things.

CONCERN EXPRESSED

"I know we ourselves are dissatisfied that it takes so long. I would like to remind you that soon after the election I expressed my concern at the organizational setup we have."

Council did consider that and certain changes in administration were made, he said. Authority was given for an additional city clerk.

Referring to Ald. McKnight's suggestion that council return to the old weekly system of meetings, Mayor Bishop said:

"I have worked under both systems and, from my own experience, the day we switched to the city manager system, efficiency increased tremendously."

"It is not the system, it is not enough people."

Park Fund Helped By Greasy Piglets

GANGES — It was the day of the Great Piglet Chase on Saturday as funds were raised for the centennial park fund.

There were roars of laughter from the many spectators who turned out to watch young and old competitors scrambling after the small animals in a grocery piglet contest.

At times it seemed as if the piglets would never be caught for they continually slipped out of contestants' clutches, leaving them lying flat on the ground — clutching lumps of dirt or lying in a mud puddle.

Children Help

Earlier, schoolchildren, with the support of the school board, and their teachers, sold tickets and arranged for sponsors.

The idea was suggested to the local Royal Canadian Legion by John Stepanuk who, with his wife Mary, raised the piglets and donated one which was sponsored by the Legion.

General convenor for the event was Adrian Wolfe-Milner, chairman of the centennial park maintenance committee.

No Casualties

Other helpers were Pat Lee, Norman Mount, Louise Wolfe-Milner and Lyle Brown. Dorothy Kyle and Joan Buckley were in charge of the refreshment stall. Judges were Peter Bingham, Desmond Crofton and Insp. Don McOrriek.

One of the leading contestants was Jim Merrett who took only 20 seconds — the shortest time recorded during the afternoon estimated yet, said an official.

The total amount has not been estimated yet, said an official, as pledges and donations are still being received.

Winners' List

Winners of the 12 heats, with sponsors, were: Rainbow Beach Resort, Dick Egg; Cedar Beach Resort, a tie between Darryl Fraser and Tammy Langdon; St. Mary's Lake Resort, Sandra Williams; Harbour House Hotel, a tie between Brian Dogdon-vitch and Ron Stepanuk; Salt Spring, A. J. and Marina Scott Stepanuk; Harbour Grocery, Linda Byron; Farmers Institute, Peter Layard; G.R.S. 11 Metre Radio Club, Dave Williams; A Watch, Sechelt Queen (women's event) a tie between Dorothy Kyle and Louise Harkema; Ganges Pharmacy, tie between Glen Woodley and Doctor Fisher; Salt Spring Insurance Co., Jim Merrett; Royal Canadian Legion, Don Layard; residents of the Cranberry, Robin Goddard.

Guinea Pigs

Also held was a guinea pig contest for children between five and nine.

Winners were: 2 Susan Mount, Warren Kyle and Maureen Warren; 2 David Tara and Garry Hartwig; 3 Trevor Dixon, Mitchell Lorimer and Debbie Reynolds. The guinea pigs were raised and donated by Scott, Ronnie, Peter and David Stepanuk.

DUNCAN — A charge of attempted murder has been laid against Jim Oyen of Duncan. He was remanded without plea until Oct. 24.

Arrested Saturday night, Mr. Oyen was granted $3,000 bail.

Campbell River

Five Injured

CAMPBELL RIVER — Three accidents in the Campbell River area on Saturday resulted in five people receiving injuries.

Pedestrian Alvin Sow, 48, of Campbell River, received head injuries in an accident in which a car driven by Kenneth Elmarson of Peterson Road, Mr. Sow is said to be in satisfactory condition. Police say charges are not contemplated.

A motorcycle, ridden by Patrick Owey, 15, was involved in a collision with a car driven by George Beithel of 2140 15th Avenue, Campbell River. Mr. Owey received a broken leg. Three people were injured in a single car accident two miles north of Campbell River.

They were Donald Chernoff, Darryl Enger, and Ron Burkholz, all aged 18, of Campbell River. A car, driven by Mr. Chernoff, left the road. They were discharged from hospital after treatment.

Lost Hunter Returns Under Own Steam

LAKE COWICHAN — Twenty-three-year-old army corporal Vern Smith walked out of the bush unharmed late Sunday. He was picked up by employees of B.C. Forest Products on Port Renfrew road, near Braden Creek, and was driven to Lake Cowichan.

Police said he had been hunting in the Gordon River area. A search party, formed by the valley fish and game club went out when he failed to return Sunday morning.

Girl Can Stay In Britain

LONDON (CP) — Judy Buckingham, a 24-year-old Port Alberni woman who wants to stay in Britain as a police-woman, is reported to have been granted government permission to remain — despite problems about immigration procedures.

She came to Britain two years ago and found a temporary job as a typist with Hampshire County police.

Last May she decided to join the force but after starting her police training was told by the government she would have to return to Canada in order to obtain a work permit for Britain.

She first came here as a Commonwealth visitor on a working holiday.

An organization representing Britain's police officers asked the government to allow the girl from Port Alberni to stay, the idea apparently being that she should be permitted to apply for the work document without going home.

The Daily Mail now reports that the government has decided on this course, which can be adopted in exceptional circumstances.

Also involved in efforts to obtain this decision was her commanding officer at her station in Basingstoke, southwest of London, Chief Constable Douglas Ombred.

Children's Camp Avoids Social Aid

NANAIMO — The Vancouver Island camp school for special children at Shawanigan Lake is still the only one of its kind in Canada, it was stated Tuesday at the camp's executive meeting.

Dr. S. E. Jensen, executive medical director, said he has been asked to give a paper on operation and success of the camp in a Seattle medical convention in April.

He said the pilot project has met with success every year, with only one exception — a 19-year-old boy, "Largo for his size," had resented others trying to help him and was destructive.

For that reason, the boy was sent back to his parents. "But he still seemed to benefit from the few days he was there," Dr. Jensen added.

The camp is held for two weeks at Cliffside preparatory school, Shawanigan Lake. Its aim is to give concentrated attention to children with emotional problems.

Dr. Jensen said this year was the first the camp has not accepted funds from social welfare for the children.

He said that if camp authorities wished they could have the pilot project entirely financed by social welfare but that all the children would be placed by them the department.

He said the camp was originally founded for treatment of island children and had been financed almost entirely by donated funds and parents who can afford to pay.

He said many people are surprised that there is no screening of children to ensure the project's success.

"The children have been accepted because the children are uncontrollable. We have been able to deal with all the children except one."

Madam Zorkin, chairman of a proposed society, took immediate objection to the CBC attitude who declined to cover closing exercises because "it is no longer news."

"Children under 12 aren't damaging property — they're not hurting society — they're overlooked. Everyone's concerned when they start damaging things," he added.

Part of Tax Money Goes for Training

NORTH COWICHAN — Taxpayers in the south of North Cowichan receive maximum use of their tax dollar, part of which is spent on firemen's training, says North Cowichan-Southend Fire Chief Pat Clackson.

He explained the rigid requirements for a firefighter. "A fireman must earn his badge. The prospective fireman must be between 18 and 40 years of age, and a member of the fire department must sponsor him. He is then interviewed to determine whether he will be able to devote enough time to the department."

SIX MONTHS
If he is accepted, a physical examination is required.

If all the requirements are passed he is accepted as a probationer for a period of six months, during which time he will receive basic training in 20 subjects, including: hose and ladder work, pumping, respiratory driving, and knots.

The probationer is then given a test which requires a pass of 65 per cent before being presented with a fireman's badge.

ALL ASPECTS

Chief Clackson said, "It takes approximately one to two years for a volunteer fireman to become reasonably proficient in all aspects of firemanship."

The fire department has 40 two-hour practices a year and 12 business meetings to discuss fire-fighting methods.

The chief attends the B.C. Fire Chief's College once a year and the fire department has a comprehensive library with literature on equipment and methods.

ALARM AVERAGE

"We are averaging 55 alarms a year."

The fireman is paid $2 an alarm, whether it is five minutes or five hours, and $4 per practice," said Chief Clackson.

The emergency telephone in the police office. When a call is received the officer will sound the alarm and dial a number so that all the firemen's private telephones will ring simultaneously.

FOUR CREWS

The department now has 24 members and there are four crews with five men in each. Every weekend a crew is designated to remain in the area in case of a fire and two hours each Sunday are used for equipment and truck maintenance.

Mr. Clackson has been fire chief for 13 years. He said the North Cowichan fire department was the first to introduce the white fire truck to Vancouver Island.

YELLOW VEHICLES

"Now many fire departments have their trucks painted red and white and none even have yellow vehicles because it has been proven scientifically that yellow fire trucks can be best seen," the chief said.

Two Clubs Join For Pantomime

DUNCAN—The Duncan Musical Club and the Duncan Drama Club have joined forces to present the first locally-produced pantomime.

"A pantomime is a lively spoken show loosely based on a well-known fairy tale liberally sprinkled with songs and topical jokes."

"Traditionally, the lead boy is played by a girl and some female leads are portrayed by men," explained Jo Ann Leitch, publicity chairman.

The pantomime chosen by the clubs for this one occasion is Jack and the Beanstalk.

Under the direction of Ruth Murrell, the pantomime will be presented Jan. 2, 3 and 4 in the Cowichan high school auditorium. The role of Jack will be performed by Glenda Gold and Jack's teacher, Prim N. Proper, by Harold Proctor, vice-principal of Cowichan senior high.

Driver Fined

NANAIMO — Maurice van Horne, 22, of Port Alberni, has pleaded guilty in magistrate's court to impaired driving.

He was fined $300 and was prohibited from driving for six months.

Court was told he was reported by a game officer who observed him driving erratically along the old Langville Highway at about 12:50 a.m. Oct. 6. Police requested the game officer to stop him. When they arrived they were told that Mr. van Horne had crossed the centre line frequently and crowded oncoming traffic. Blood-

Navy Court Rejects Plea for Dismissal

By DON GAIN

Inexperience and "perhaps misconduct" on the part of others played their part in the grounding of the Esquimalt-based destroyer-escort HMCS Saskatchewan the morning of Sept. 8, the defending officer suggested Saturday in a plea to have three charges against the ship's captain dismissed.

The plea from Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of the office of the Judge Advocate General, Ottawa, came at the end of the case for the prosecution, put by Major D. W. Ward of the office of the Deputy Judge Advocate, Winnipeg.

The plea was denied by Cmdr. H. C. Ferne of the office of the Judge Advocate General, Ottawa, who is judge advocate in the court martial of Cmdr. Norman Jackson, captain of the Saskatchewan.

Cmdr. Jackson has pleaded not guilty to three charges of negligence at the court martial which goes into its fifth day at 9 a.m. Tuesday in CFB Esquimalt wardroom.

NO EVIDENCE
Cmdr. Henderson contended that the prosecution failed to produce evidence to substantiate the charges.

As part of his argument, he said Saskatchewan's captain lost his executive officer, his navigation officer and two watchkeepers, because the ship was heading into a major reef and personnel were being transferred out of the ship.

This left a "very heavy burden" on the captain of the ship, he said. "But the commanding officer can't personally pilot the ship. He can't do it single-handed."

Cmdr. Jackson received little support around 1100 hours

Sept. 8," he said. "The reason, I suggest, was the result of inexperience and unfamiliarity because of these changes, and perhaps misconduct in all the people he had to place confidence in for his command."

The defending officer did not elaborate on his suggestion of "misconduct."

NOT BEEN TOLD

And he said reports from the operator of the echo-sounder, who found the ship was in shallower and shallower water, never reached the captain.

The first defence witness was Capt. C. G. Pratt, commander of the Fifth Canadian Escort Squadron, Halifax.

Cmdr. Pratt, who was accepted by the court martial as an expert navigational witness, said he didn't think a blind passage plan was necessary for Active Pass.

He said he had heard of only one instance of the pass being navigated blind in a navy ship, that usually conditions were better in the pass than outside, and that fogbanks at the entrance to Active Pass were "unusual."

He based his testimony on his service in coastal ships when, as a youth, he went through the pass every day for 18 months, and on his subsequent naval service in local waters.

AVERAGE OFFICER

Asked by the prosecutor his assessment of the adequacy of supervision by Cmdr. Jackson, Capt. Pratt said that "trying to put it into the frame of an average commanding officer in the fleet, I wouldn't have expected one of my commanding officers to do more."

He testified that the Saskatchewan, in his opinion, was doing everything necessary and was following correct procedure.

QUITE HAPPY

He said he was "quite happy" with the speed of 15 knots and pointed out that, at that speed, the effect of tides on the destroyer-escort would be less.

On several points he said he hesitated to give an opinion because it would be "a matter of judgment at the time."

At the morning sitting, a navigation expert from Winnipeg testified that the Saskatchewan's entrance to Active Pass had "two unsatisfactory aspects."

ON PORT SIDE

Capt. Andrew Collier, former captain of HMCS Skeena and now deputy chief of staff at Maritime Training Command, Winnipeg, said Saskatchewan's planned track cut across the entrance and would have put it on the port side of the pass, where it might encounter ships coming out.

He said the plan was "well prepared" out of Vancouver and was "perfectly satisfactory" across the strait, but the portion into Active Pass was "not prepared at all."

He criticized the lack of dead-reckoning positions and the lack of "any future track."

NO RECORD

He said there was no record of any transfer of position lines from one particular chart to another, and said the first fix at 10:41 a.m. was "not a very good one."

"I'm not to happy with its accuracy," he said. "I don't know what happened or why the ship was so far to port of track."

On the sounding of fog apparatus, he said, it was required by the rules of the road that a ship should sound its horn if it could not stop within half the distance to the obscured area.

"You should start signals before you go into fog," the captain said.

Questioned on the speed of the ship, he said that with all circumstances "in your favor, a speed of 15 to 20 knots is no problem."

The question of manoeuvrability came into it, he said. The ship should be going at "not less than 12 knots," and in good visibility "at not less than 15 knots, because you'd not have adequate control of the ship otherwise."

Matter of Taste

Age-old mushroom problem of either toxic or harmless is pondered by University of Victoria steno-grapher May Lambert after mushroom bonanza was discovered on campus. Mushroom was identified as Coprinus Comatus, better known as shaggy mane which is edible in early growth but not when mature, according to UVic experts.—(William E. John)

Shipyard Workers Ratify Agreement

Shipyard workers at Yarrow's Ltd. in Victoria and Burrard Dry Dock in North Vancouver have ratified a two-year agreement that provides a 14-per-cent wage increase.

Some 800 workers are affected. They earned from $3.02 to $3.70 an hour under the old contract. They failed in their attempt to win reduction of the work day from eight to 7½ hours and a 12½-per-cent wage hike in a one-year contract.

Fringe benefit improvements include double time for all overtime, and Easter Monday as a 10th statutory holiday.

Household Appeal Poised

A house to house search of Greater Victoria to find $128,000 starts Tuesday for 2,100 United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal canvassers in the last phase of this year's campaign to raise $655,000.

The residential division, direct by Mrs. Bonner Aust, expects to receive about 33,000 citizens' donations.

A problem facing canvassers is meeting apartment dwellers living in buildings with electronically controlled entrances.

Last year at campaign time there were about 2,500 suites in controlled-access blocks.

Marketing Class Set

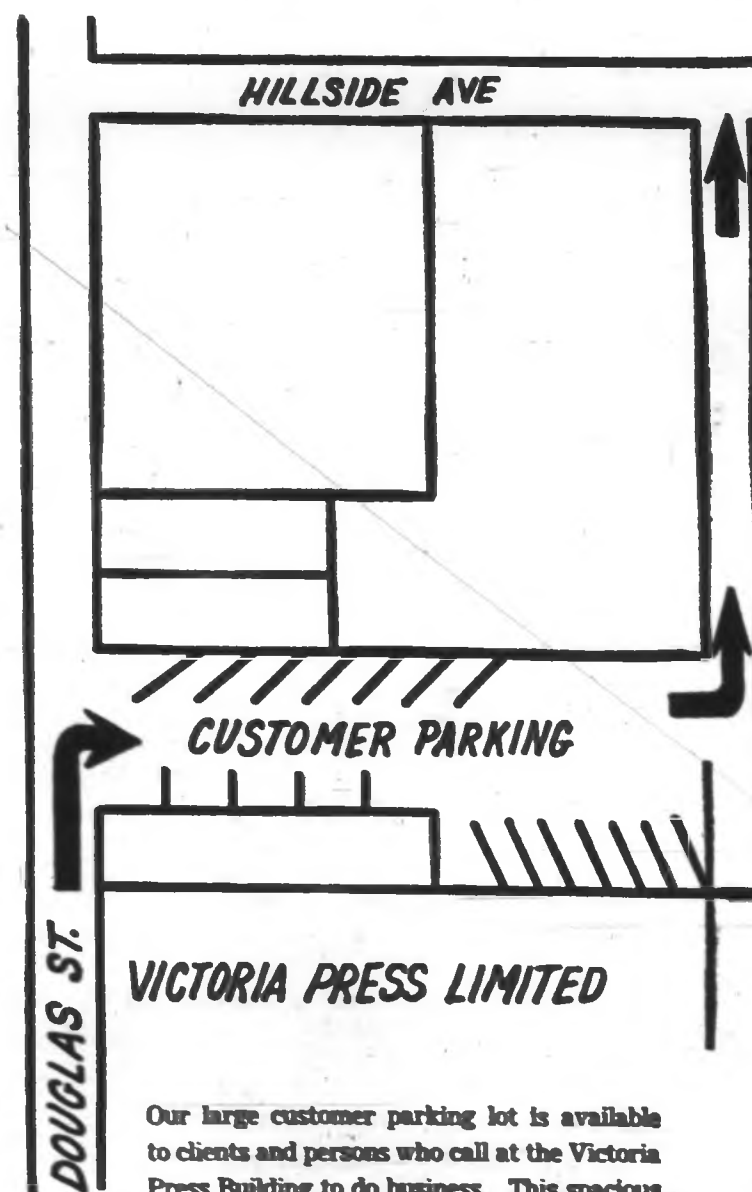

A certificate course in marketing for the hospitality industry begins Tuesday at the Institute of Adult Studies, co-sponsored by the Institute, the Victoria Hotels Association, the B.C. departments of travel industry and education, and the federal department of manpower and immigration. First speaker will be Dennis Mason Hurley, on Analysing the Marketing Problem.

Christmas Circling Now Possibility

Apollo Opens Moon-Trip Door

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 7, sailing into its second hundredth hour in space, has opened the door for firm planning on putting three men around the moon on Christmas Day.

A reliable source said Tuesday the flight of Apollo 7 is going so well that high United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials are meeting this week to set a date for a flight around the moon. One source set launch day as Dec. 21, this year.

The source said contractors believe they will be able to establish procedures of training and hardware operation in time to make the flight in December. NASA, he said, is "busting a gut" to meet the December date.

"It will all depend upon whether the astronauts can get in enough training to do it," he said. "Everything else will be ready."

The only thing that might block a circum-lunar flight for Apollo 8, the next manned mission, would be problems with the 11-day flight of Apollo 7.

But Apollo 7 was flying in "good shape," said flight controller Glynn Lunney, although the astronauts are fighting colds.

blocked, the crew could have intense pain on re-entry when the spacecraft pressure changes in less than half an hour from the five pounds a square inch used in space to the normal sea-level pressure of 14.7 pounds a square inch.

Forces Pay Increase Retroactive to Oct. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases for the armed forces will be announced in three to four weeks and will be retroactive to Oct. 1, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said Tuesday.

Cadieux said the announcement will not involve service pensions. The aim is to adjust salaries "and do some catching up."

DEFIANT PUPILS FACE REPRISALS

Voting Age in Britain Going Down to 18

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government has announced it will lower the voting age to 18 from 21, increasing the electorate by 3,000,000 voters to 40,000,000. A bill will be introduced in Parliament to enable teenage voters to register by February, 1970, well in time for the next election.

MONTREAL (CP) — Alarmed authorities threatened reprisals Tuesday as student protests snowballed across the province, with defiant teenagers taking over two more junior colleges and sympathizers boycotting classes in other institutions. (See also Page 24.)

Ten of Quebec's 23 new junior colleges now are entirely in student hands, with the latest two occupations in Chicoutimi and St. Johns. In addition, students have occupied three of the four buildings of an 11th institution, Old Montreal College.

Sympathizers took over the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Montreal and a high school in suburban Laval, while a one-day boycott of classes affected the University of Montreal and the province's seven normal schools.

Concern over the mushrooming extra-the-teacher movement, which now involves about 28,000 students — brought college administrators together for an emergency meeting Monday night.

PLANS FOR ACTION

There was no collective announcement after the closed-door session, but administrators of two Montreal colleges — Maisonneuve and Old Montreal — announced plans for "concrete action."

Massonville authorities said calling in the police was "one of about 10 possible actions" under consideration, but this would be a last resort.

Denis Latour, associate director of student services at Old Montreal, said action by his college might go as far as non-recognition of student achievement so far this year. This would make it necessary for students to start the year's work over again.

FERMER STAND

In the Saguenay River city of Chicoutimi, where students took over their college after voting 215 to 318 in favor of the move, college authorities took an even firmer stand.

Classes will resume Monday, Oct. 21, the college announced, and students who do not show up will lose their year's work.

The youthful strikers have two main grievances against the provincial government — a lack of university facilities and a reduced student aid policy which includes a cutback in scholarship funds and higher interest rates for student loans.

About the lack of facilities, students say 60 per cent of the first graduates of the new post-secondary colleges will find no place to live.

Rhodesian Front Party

British Bid Rejected

From IPI CP

The ruling Rhodesian Front Party Tuesday night rejected outright the latest British proposals for settlement of the Rhodesian independence issue, giving a strong indication that the government of Premier Ian Smith also will turn them down.

Party chairman Ralph Ntshang said, "To have accepted the British proposals would have been total and abject surrender."

The British proposals were given to Smith last Sunday at the end of his 10-hour talks with British Prime Minister Wilson aboard the British assault ship HMS Fearless at Gibraltar.

Smith took the proposals back to Salisbury and laid them before a cabinet meeting Tuesday morning but no formal decision on them has been taken so far.

The proposals were published in a white paper in London Tuesday.

The Rhodesian Front Party executive is scheduled to meet today to consider the proposals, and well-attended political sources believe it will reject them.

In London, Wilson told Parliament Tuesday Britain would stand fast in its demand that rebel Rhodesia must develop majority rule by black Africans as a condition for official independence.

Wilson said he was "keeping the door open" to further contacts on the subject although Smith left the Gibraltar talks with Wilson after no apparent progress.

Wilson said in reviewing those talks for parliamentary members:

"Our position at the end of the talks, as throughout these past years, remains the position repeatedly stated . . . No retreat, no alarming the door by us."

He emphasized the British government would not compromise.

Garrison Terms Set By Czechs, Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Otdzhik, Czechoslovakia's agreed with Kremlin leaders Tuesday on a treaty dealing with basing of Soviet troops in his country. Czechoslovak sources said it was eight weeks to the day after the Warsaw pact invasion.

Official confirmation of an agreement was lacking.

The Russians sought such a treaty to give final legality to the presence of their soldiers in Czechoslovakia.

NO INTERFERENCE

The Czechoslovak radio's Moscow correspondent, Antonin Kmita, reported in a dispatch received in Prague that the treaty covering economic and legal conditions for stationing troops probably would be signed today. Prague television reported Czechoslovakia was assured by the Kremlin that Russian troops would not interfere in Czechoslovak internal affairs.

CERTAIN QUESTIONS

Czechoslovak sources reported Otdzhik, who returned to Moscow Monday for his fourth visit since the Soviet Union and four orthodox allies dispatched military forces to curb Czechoslovakia's liberalization program, would be heading back soon to Prague.

A communique, relayed abroad by the Czechoslovak

news agency CTK, said the two sides exchanged views on certain questions resulting from previous Moscow agreements, "especially as regards the conditions of a temporary stationing of Soviet troops on Czechoslovak territory as envisaged by the communique on Soviet-Czechoslovak talks held in Moscow Oct. 24, 1968."

The Soviet news agency Tass, paraphrasing the same communique, said the topics included "the question of the terms for the temporary stay" of the troops.

The crew, navy Capt. Walter Schirra, Walter Cunningham and air force Maj. Donn Eisele, took television viewers on a tour of the world's highest sickness Tuesday. They ignored their colds long enough to perform some zero-gravity acrobatics.

The spacemen, all needing a shave, cavorted in the weightlessness of outer space while the Apollo television camera carried their antics live to an audience on earth.

"Coming to you live from outer space, the one and only original Apollo orbiting road show starring the great acrobats from outer space, Walt Schirra and Walt Cunningham," Schirra announced as the space-to-ground TV signal started.

Eisele began the show with a sign used Monday in their first live telecast from space: "Hello from the Apollo room, high above everything."

First Cunningham and then Schirra floated into view from the spacecraft's lower equipment bay. They resembled swimmers under water, gliding smoothly and without effort past the camera.

Schirra then gave a televised tour of the complex spacecraft. The camera showed the crew members working before the cameras and displays which monitor the health of the spacecraft.

At one point Eisele placed a pen in mid-air. The pen stayed there until he reached up to use it again.

The flyers obviously were concerned about their colds congesting the tubes leading to the ears. If these tubes are

Team Sees No Genocide

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — A team of foreign observers Tuesday reported no evidence supporting claims of genocide in Eastern Nigeria where rebel Biafrans are making a last stand against federal troops. The team had visited the southern sector of the fighting front where a federal noose is tightening around Umuahia, last major city in Biafran hands.

The international observer group issued a similar finding after a visit to the northern sector two weeks ago.

The team was headed by British army Gen. Henry Alexander and included officers from Sweden, Canada and Poland. They also reported that refugees behind the fighting lines were mostly in good condition. (See also Page 3.)

LARGE NUMBER

The report said more than half the refugees the team saw in federal camps outside the fighting zone were in a fair state of health and were being well looked after. However, some of the others, including a large number of children, were suffering from malnutrition.

The team also said there was a great shortage of doctors in the sector they visited. Aid on the ground from the army and the Red Cross did not exist on the scale it did in the northern sector and the Eastern Calabar region.

HOW FARING?

As the team published its report, there was no new indication how the federal troops were faring in their bid to end the civil war, which started May 30, 1967.

Most recent reports said federal troops were holding off a final assault on Umuahia in the hope that the rebel leaders would agree to negotiate an end to the strife.

However, the federal government has made it clear it will insist on an end to the Biafran secession as a condition for ending the war.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian newspapers want everyone but themselves to help put the post office on a pay-as-you-go basis, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said in the Commons Tuesday.

He said newspapers gave almost unanimous editorial approval when he first announced that he wanted to balance the post office budget.

"Now the question is: 'Who, me?'" said Kierans.

TOUGH REPLY

The postmaster-general replied toughly to an opposition assault on his plans to increase the rates on second-class mail — which includes mailed newspapers — and to stop Saturday mail deliveries.

He said the present subsidy afforded publishers by the Canadian public in delivery of their publications is $37,000,000 annually.

He repeated his refusal to send rate-increasing legislation to a Commons committee for discussion before it is passed by Parliament.

ARGUMENTS ONLY

But he disclosed that 25 Liberal MPs had formed a caucus group to study five-day delivery and he would listen to their arguments, not to opposition "emotion."

He also promised to make public by Thursday a series of financial statements and supporting documents prepared by his department as a basis for the decisions to change postal rates and delivery schedules.
